RA Drops 30 Projects, Cuts Loans, Personnel; Liquidation Indicated

Wide Curtailment Hints Operations Are Being Drawn to Close.

Shortage of Funds, Drought Cost Cited

Work to Be Completed Only on Undertakings Now Under Way.

By Robert C. Albright.

Rigid curtailment of the resettlement program, slashing of new projects planned, scaling down of rehabilitation loans and reductions in personnel were disclosed yesterday by officials of the Resettlement Administration.

Slashes pointed to virtual liquidation in the near future of the broad scope program originally planned. Except for community undertakings actually under way and so-called "infiltration" projects that are being finished off with a minimum of expenditure, the program appeared in process of a "clean-up."

In the last fortnight 30 projects for which plans have been approved, and land, in some cases land optioned, have been abandoned. Officials explained no construction was under way on any of these 30 projects.

The revised program calls for "completion" only of projects on which construction has started. These are limited to about 89 resettlement projects, including the three "model" suburban developments at Cincinnati, Milwaukee and Greenbelt, Md. About 24 of the 89 actually have been completed.

Retrenchment was attributed by C. B. Baldwin, assistant administrator, to shortage of funds, both from failure of Congress to appropriate and the unexpected load of the drought. Baldwin denied that "policy" changes dictated the curtailment in operations.

With the RA drought cost estimated in one quarter at $70,000,000, the cost of continued supplementary loans and grants placed at $25,000,000, and outside expenditures on the 69 continued projects figured at $25,000,000, the Resettlement Administration would need $120,000,000 to complete this limited program.

Actually only $65,500,000 was granted in the 1936 relief act, with a possibility that about $13,000,000 more will be made available if the President takes advantage of his 15 per cent transfer power under the act. Thus even the restricted program now going forward may not be completed unless Congress makes new appropriations. Officials said the President's announced intention to ask Congress for money for feed and seed loans would be tantamount to new funds for them, as they are now carrying much of this load.

May Be Sufficient.

To administer this $120,000,000 program, it will cost the Resettlement Administration approximately $25,000,000 additional. Baldwin said that additional sums would be provided from the general relief fund. For land development, another $15,000,000 has been allocated by the Works Progress Administration. If additional land development funds are not available, Baldwin said the RA would make the $15,000,000 do.

Acquisition of submarginal land, involving a total of 9,500,000 acres already optioned, obligated or acquired, is about nine-tenths completed. Titles actually have been cleared on about 2,000,000 acres, but ultimately the total 9,500,000 will be retired from farm production. This operation is being financed from $48,000,000 of old funds.

Cracking Down on Dope

Fate Often Aids U. S. Officers in Stemming Illicit Traffic of Ingenious Smugglers.

By Gerald Gross.

Without the assistance and cooperation of other law enforcement bodies—Federal, State and local—the Bureau of Narcotics would be unable to maintain the formidable reputation it has attained in a mere six years of existence.

A customs guard, his ever-suspecting eyes trained to catch the slightest irregularity, sights a disembarking individual whose bulging waist is all out of proportion to a pair of slender shoulders. Answer: A smuggler wearing an ingeniously contrived vest fitted with many pockets and each pocket fitted with a can of smoking opium.

A State highway patrolman arrests a speeder who throws away a small package before he is captured. The officer recovers the package, which is found to contain heroin.

The close tieup between the Bureaus of Customs and Narcotics is illustrated by an order of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau which went into effect yesterday. It provides for transfer of customs border patrolmen to the Customs Agency Service, the better to crack down on the illicit dope traffic.

Disturbed by the volume of smoking opium and manufactured drugs being smuggled into the United States, Secretary Morgenthau decided to expand the Customs Agency Service, investigative unit of the bureau in charge of Deputy Commissioner Thomas J. Gorman, by giving it 570 additional agents.

The transfer puts some 275 investigators under Gorman's direction, their duties being to suppress smuggling in general. In the matter of narcotics, they will work in close co-operation with Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger and his 250 agents.

The Postoffice Department, Department of Justice, city police forces, small town constables—all are indispensable in the crusade again the illicit drug traffic.

Some of the most interesting cases in the Bureau of Narcotic files, however, had their origins in pure chance. They required no undercover sleuthing, no interchange of cablegrams between nations, no elaborate build-up. They just happened.

Chance or fate, or call it what you will, deserves credit for exposing the first case of illegal manufacture of morphine from opium in this country. But for an explosion last year in his Bronx home, Pietro Quinto might still be producing the white dynamite on a large scale.

Quinto was a cultured chemist and pharmacist, holder of a doctor's degree from the University of

The Spanish Revolt.

Trenches full of government forces were blasted into the air by rebel shells in a desperate assault on Irun.

Rebel leaders protested to the International Red Cross at Geneva after loyalist planes had bombarded a rebel hospital at Burgos.

Madrid tightened its defenses against air raids after rebels again dropped bombs on the capital.

Loyalist defenders of the city of Toledo prepared to dynamite the famous fortress of the Alcazar if the 1,700 rebels besieged there do not surrender.

The death toll in the bitter civil war was placed at 85,000 in an uncensored dispatch from Spain.

Both the Madrid government and the rebel high command told the United States they knew nothing of the aerial bombs dropped near the U. S. S. destroyer Kane.

Irun, Spain, Sept. 1.—Trenches full of government forces were blown into the air by direct hits of rebel shells in a desperate assault on this beleaguered city tonight.

Time and time again the rebel artillerymen found deadly range and blasted their enemy-countrymen to bits.

After each instance of this mass carnage, government reinforcements rushed out from Irun to meet death from the next shell.

Within the besieged city itself, the prayers of shackled rebel hostages in the streets mingled with the shriek of shot and shell fired at them by their own comrades.

Prepare for Fight to Death.

Driven back to last-line trenches on hilltops only a mile from Irun, the government defenders tonight dragged field pieces behind the crumbling walls of the city in readiness for a fight to the death, with the city's already bloody streets as the final battlefield.

If the last-line trenches fail to hold off the next rebel attack, the government defenders will have only surrender as their alternative to a hand-to-hand battle within Irun.

The government men have said time and again they never would surrender.

Under the deadly accuracy of the rebel cannoding government forces fell back from one position after another, their uncounted dead littering the battlefield.

Another Barrage Loosed.

The rebels immediately trained their guns on this position and loosed another barrage.

Steel-helmeted rebel Foreign Legionnaires slithered up the hillsides ready to charge the government's last redoubt. Carrying machine guns, they picked their way stealthily along the fringe of a pine woods toward the defenders.

Y. W. Official Is Murdered; 20 Arrested

California Gully Yields Body of Woman, Hairs Clutched in Hand.

Over Score of Men With Sex-Offense Records Are Rounded Up.

By the Associated Press.

La Jolla, Calif., Sept. 1.—The police rounded up more than 20 men with sex-offense records tonight for questioning in the brutal attack-slaying of Miss Ruth Muir, 48-year-old welfare worker and daughter of a San Antonio (Tex.) banker.

Her body, battered and almost unrecognizable, was found early today near La Jolla's surf, playground of vacationing rich, on the outskirts of San Diego.

Chief of Police George Sears ordered a roundup of all persons arrested recently in San Diego and vicinity on morals charges.

Miss Muir, secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association at Riverside, Calif., a career she embarked upon after graduating from Wellesley College, was vacationing here with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Muir, her parents.

Her body was found near a beach bench overlooking the sea. The skull and jaw were broken, underclothing torn, and the ground was spotted with blood marks.

Detective Capt. Harry Kelly questioned several men, among them E. Carl Eckdohl, 41, who was ordered released and then was picked up again, to be held overnight.

A wisp of hair clutched in Miss Muir's hands, with locks from the heads of several suspects, including Eckdohl, was sent to Pomona College for analysis.

Her Bracelet Missing.

Tonight laboratory tests were to be made of blood and other material found under the victim's finger nails.

Detectives said they believed Miss Muir had been struck with a jagged instrument, possibly a rock, and dragged 25 yards from the seaside bench. Discovery of dark hairs clutched in her left hand indicated she regained consciousness and fought to ward off an attack. There were signs of a terrific struggle.

Kelly said it was probable that the death weapon was hurled into the sea.

A gold bracelet, one of Miss Muir's few ornamental possessions, was missing from her arm, but her glasses and a comb were found near the bench.

The scene of the crime was about 500 yards from the Muir summer home.

Neighbors said a mysterious man had been seen in the neighborhood yesterday. Others reported a yellow roadster had been seen driving to and fro in front of the Muir home shortly before the woman disappeared.

The family said Miss Muir left the house about 9:30 o'clock last night to put her car in the garage at the rear. When she failed to return her parents waited until midnight and then reported to the police.

Mrs. Ann Holden, a patient at Scripps Metabolic Clinic in La Jolla, found the body while out for a walk.

Other Murders Unsolved.

Although Miss Muir made her debut in San Antonio in the 1910-11 season, she did not care for society and found her life work in welfare activities. In September, 1930, she terminated 15 continuous years as general secretary of the San Antonio Y. W. C. A. She studied a year in New York before accepting the secretaryship of the Y. W. C. A. at Riverside.

The cases of five other women and two men similarly killed in San Diego in the last six years remain unsolved.

The cycle of mysterious killings began in 1931, when Virginia Brooks, 10, disappeared and her mutilated body was found a month later on lonely Camp Kearney mesa.

Soon afterward, pretty Louise Teuber, 17, was beaten, stripped and hanged to a tree in a park.

Mrs. W. D. Bibbens, middle-aged race track habitue, was found strangled in her downtown apartment. A suspect was returned here from Pennsylvania but released.

Hazel Bradshaw, 22-year-old brunette, was found in picturesque Balboa Park. She had been stabbed 17 times. A boy acquaintance was tried for murder and acquitted.

Girl Strangled in 1934.

Celia Cota, 16, daughter of a Mexican customs broker, was criminally attacked and strangled to death in August, 1934. Her body was found in the back yard of her home.

Claude Trader, 34, was shot to death in June, 1933, by a man who lured him into a lonely back country area. Gerhard Cordes, police officer, was tried for the killing and acquitted.

The mutilated body of Dalbert Aposhian, 7, was found in San Diego Bay in July, 1933. Autopsy surgeons said he had been criminally attacked and slashed.

$2,000,000,000 Deficit Revealed by Roosevelt; Size of Debt Indefinite

President Pays Tribute to Dern In Salt Lake City Military Rites

Heads Group of High Government Officials at Funeral of Secretary of War; Throng Fills Mormon Church for Services.

By the United Press.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 1.—While the Nation's great and humble paid homage to his memory, the body of Secretary of War George H. Dern was lowered into a grave on the grassy, vine-clad slopes of Mount Olivet Cemetery today.

Forty U. S. Army riflemen fired three volleys over an open grave. The echo of taps faded away up the rugged slopes of the Wasatch Mountains and the sun set on the career of the rugged Westerner who rose from the mines of a virgin frontier to the third highest post in the Cabinet of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

President Rosevelt, head bared, was at the graveside to pay final respects to the third member of his Cabinet to die since 1933. Thomas A. Walsh, appointed Attorney General, passed first, then William Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury.

Three of Dern's fellow members in the President's official family were present. Three acting Cabinet members mourned with bereaved relatives. On every hand were officials high in the private, public and military life of the Nation and in the background were thousands of persons who followed Dern's ascendancy from a minor seat in the Utah Legislature to his high Cabinet post.

Dern's body was brought home at 8 a. m. today aboard a funeral train draped with mourning. Ten minutes later, President Roosevelt and a group of high Government officials arrived unostentatiously aboard the special train on which the President was touring the country's drought area when Dern's death intervened.

The President remained aboard his curtained special car until a few minutes before the funeral services began.

While an Army band played a dirge, Dern's flag-draped casket was removed from the funeral car. Borne by six Army sergeants and escorted by a ranking guard of honor, the casket was carried slowly to a hearse.

Through streets lined with silent crowds, the hearse proceeded slowly to the great, high-domed Capital building, where Dern held office for two terms as Utah's Governor.

For four hours, from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m., Dern's body lay in state in

President Blames Bonus, AAA Ruling

Says Working Balance Will Be Slashed by $1,100,000,000.

Text of President's Statement—Page 7.

By Sidney Olson.

President Rosevelt last night estimated the deficit for the present fiscal year, which began July 1, at $2,096,996,300.

This estimate is almost one billion dollars more than his January budget message estimate of $1,098,000,000. In that message, however, he did not set forth a definite figure for relief expenditures, and the later Congressional appropriation of $1,500,000,000 shot the figure to a point where recent Treasury estimates have held the deficit would be about $3,000,000,000 for this fiscal year.

The special budget summation released last night by Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell therefore represents a slash of $900,000,000 in the expected 1937 deficit.

The President gave two reasons for the increase in the gross deficit, attributing it to the same causes he previously has outlined.

He held responsible for the increase two factors—payment by Congress of the soldiers' bonus which jumped payments to veterans by $1,674,000,000, and will cause a further payment of an estimated $560,000,000 this fiscal year; and the Supreme Court decision which shattered the old Agricultural Adjustment Administration, costing the Treasury $452,000,000 in processing tax revenues.

$580,000,000 for Debt.

Included in the estimated 1937 deficit of more than $2,000,000,000 are $580,000,000 for statutory debt retirement and the $560,000,000 for further bonus payments.

When the amount of the statutory debt retirement is deducted, the net deficit for the fiscal year 1937 will be $1,516,996,300, the President figured.

In this connection the President said:

"This does not mean that there will be an increase in the public debt of this amount ($1,516,996,300), for the reason that it is contemplated during the year to reduce the working balance of the general fund by approximately $1,100,000,000."

Reviewing the events of the year which wrecked his budget, which was complete except for contemplated relief expenditures, the President discussed in his summation the loss of revenues from the Supreme Court's adverse AAA decision, the passage of legislation to meet the Government's moral obligation to contracting farmers, and the bonus measure's passage.

Then he outlined the method by which the Government attempted to meet the additional requirements of the Treasury. He asked Congress to pass a revenue measure which would make good the loss of processing taxes in the fiscal year 1936; defray the annual cost of operation of the new farm program and which would amortize over a period of nine years the cost of payment of the adjusted service certificates to the veterans.

Discusses Added Revenue.

He estimated the revenue act of 1936 would produce $652,000,000 in annual revenues on the basis of present business conditions, but reminded that "for the fiscal year 1937 the amount of this revenue will be only $328,000,000, since only the first and second of the quarterly payments of income taxes under this act will be made to the Treasury within that year. For the same year, however, there will be a nonrecurring revenue of $82,000,000 from the so-called windfall taxes."

The President estimated total receipts in the fiscal year 1937 at $5,665,839,000, a net increase of $12,000,000 over the January budget estimate, and the second highest in the country's history.

He pointed out that estimated increases in general revenue more than offset revenue losses incurred partly from invalidation of process-

Dubinsky Out; Upbraids A.F.L. For Union Split

Council Exceeded Powers in Suspending Group, Says Vice President.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—David Dubinsky, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, tonight resigned in protest of the suspension of ten unions affiliated with John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization.

Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, also associated with the C. I. O., made known his resignation in a letter to President William Green, and said it was to "take effect immediately."

Dubinsky was the only A. F. of L. council member who voted August 5 against suspension of the unions. He suggested referring the controversy to the national convention, November 16, in Tampa, Fla. He was the second high official to resign, Lewis having given up his position last December.

In his letter of resignation, Dubinsky reiterated that the council exceeded its authority in suspending the unions, and therefore conflicted with the A. F. of L. constitution.

"I am more than ever convinced that the present controversy in the labor movement could have been adjusted had the matter been referred to the next convention of the federation," he said. "The council, however, decided on an obdurate course which will cause the suspension of my own international union as well as the other unions associated with the committee for industrial organization, which comprise almost 40 per cent of the total membership.

"Under these deplorable circumstances, I deem it advisable to tender my resignation as vice president of the American Federation of Labor, to take effect immediately."

Hooded Legion Is Scored as 12 Are Led to Trial

Grand Jury Assails Group as Mental Incompetents; Death Case Opens.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 1.—While 12 shackled members of the Black Legion were being led into Circuit Court today for trial on murder charges, a grand jury denounced the hooded order as a politically ambitious guerilla band mentally incapable of wresting control from established authority.

"The Black Legion was a klan with a vengeance," the report of the Oakland County (Pontiac) grand jury said, "organized to accomplish its objects by force and violence, if necessary. It was a black klan."

The report, signed by Circuit Judge George B. Hartrick, named 86 men as having belonged to the night riding organization, many of them important State, county and city officials.

May Involve Others.

Referring to the Detroit indictment charging 12 men with criminal syndicalism in an alleged Black Legion plot to seize control of the Federal Government, the report said:

"It is possible that a fuller development of testimony by missing witnesses may involve additional members, or attribute to them a crime such as that contemplated by the criminal syndicalism statute, although the future alone must determine this."

Judge Hartrick said the organization in Oakland County quickly became "enmeshed in the labyrinth of politics."

Politics spelled "its death just as certainly as the murder of Charles A. Poole May 12, 1936, sounded the death knell of the Black Legion in Wayne County (Detroit)," the report said.

Selection of jurors to try 10 of the 12 men charged with Poole's death went forward today in the

Landon Charts Drought Policy At Conference

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 1.—Drought and conservation studies, including a talk with a former New Deal official, occupied Gov. Alf M. Landon today as he appeared for Thursday's drought conference with President Roosevelt.

From Des Moines, Iowa, where the Kansan will motor to meet his Presidential opponent at the conference table, came J. N. (Ding) Darling, who served as chief of the Agriculture Department's Biological Survey, to discuss conservation policies with the Republican nominee and pledge his support.

Also participating in the discussion were two Kansas State College officials who will serve as aids to the Governor at Des Moines, Dr. L. E. Call, dean of agriculture, and Dr. W. E. Grimes, head of the department of sociology and economics. Another visitor was Elmer Peterson, editor of Better Homes and Gardens.

Afterward, Darling told newsmen "I am supporting Gov. Landon because I lost faith in the ability of

Inquiry Forces 2 to Surrender In O'Brien Case

Shooting Suspects Walk Into Station After Brown Order.

Washington's underworld "turned on the heat" against two of its racheteer denizens late yesterday, and as a result Clarence (Cocky) Ware, 32, and John Sweeney, 19, members of the Warring "Foggy Bottom Gang," walked into the Third Precinct Station and surrendered.

Their surrender followed an announcement by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, of an investigation of a reported "tieup" between the Warring gang and certain policemen.

One report was that the fugitives had been able to elude capture because friendly policemen tipped them off in advance of raids.

Ware and Sweeney, along with Vernon (Lega) Tate, 25, had been sought for five weeks in connection with the shooting on July 21 of Joseph Edward O'Brien, a small-time bootlegger.

$20,000 Bond.

The two men were charged with assault with intent to kill. Their bond was set at $20,000 each and they were locked up at the First Precinct station.

Sweeney told Private W. J. Rice, clerk at the Third Precinct, that he and Ware had been on a "vacation" and upon their return had read in the newspapers that they were wanted by police.

"Where did you go on your vacation?" Rice asked.

Sweeney was silent.

Lieut. Clement Cox and members of his "flying squadron" of raiders have demoralized the gamblers of Washington in their search for Ware, Sweeney and Tate, it was said. Cox announced a month ago that he would raid every "joint" in the city until he found the fugitives, and he proceeded to do just that. He and his raiders have crashed into more than a score of places since the O'Brien shooting.

Mercury Expected To Reach 90 Today

After dropping to 57 at 6 a. m., the lowest temperature since June 24, the mercury yesterday bounced back up to 84 degrees to end a three-day cool spell.

Today will be even warmer, the Weather Bureau predicted, with the possibility of the thermometer reaching 90, despite probable light showers.

Yesterday's low of 57 was 2 degrees below that of the previous day, but was a degree warmer than the low mark of September 1 last year.

Spanish Rebels, Loyalists Deny Attack on Kane

By Felix Bruner.

Both the Spanish government and leaders of insurgent forces in Spain yesterday denied any knowledge of the attempted bombing of the United States destroyer Kane off the coast of Spain Sunday.

The denials were in reply to a protest transmitted by Secretary of State Hull upon instructions from President Roosevelt.

Government officials denied categorically that the plane which dropped nine bombs around the destroyer and which was driven off by the ship's antiaircraft guns belonged to the government.

Gen. Queipo de Llano, rebel general, who was given the American protest in the absence of Gen. Francisco Franco, the insurgent commander, replied that "certainly his forces had no reason for troubling American vessels."

The United States Government had asked positive orders be issued to prevent another similar incident. The Spanish government replied such orders had been issued some time ago and the rebel leader said similar orders had gone to all his aviators.

The replies were transmitted informally by American diplomatic officials. The protest to the loyal government was made by Eric C. Wendelin, in charge of the United States Embassy in Madrid, and to the rebels, by Consul Charles A. Bay at Seville.

Wendelin reported he had delivered the American protest to the

Parisian's Non-Affine Geometry Baffles World Mathematicians

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 1.—A new kind of mathematics so unheard of that a colleague of Einstein and several of the foremost mathematicians attending the Harvard tercentenary celebration said, when they read of it in advance, they did not understand it, was offered the world today.

Elie Joseph Cartan, professor of mathematics at the University of Paris, called his invention "non-affine geometrics," and after his explanation today some of the several hundred mathematicians in the audience declared it promises to help solve intricate problems now troubling investigators into the unknown.

They said Dr. Cartan had sensed and set right a misconception about the most accurate methods of using the mathematical symbols known as tensors. Dr. Cartan himself gave as an example of "non-affine geometry" the taking of two photographs of the same object, from different angles. Laying one of them over the other, it is not possible to stretch or deform them so that the details superimpose.

"Non-affine geometry" figuratively permits this matching. It is applied to viewing mathematical problems from two points of view and projecting them as one.

Dr. Cartan was one of two famous European mathematicians who told of new advances in "pure thought," of the kind that astronomers and later physical scientists and everyday mathematicians apply to man's intellectual and sometimes material progress.

The other mathematical address was the presentation by Dr. Rudolf Carnap, of the German University, Prague, of a new set of logical rules for discovering all the numbers from zero to infinity which possess the same set of complicated attributes.

Harvard's tercentenary today topped the intellectual mathematical peak from which it is proposed in the next ten days to proceed down to closer study of man in his "valley" of daily life.

Judge Serves 'Term' in Prison To Learn Prisoners' Outlook

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 1.—A judge went to prison today for a three-day voluntary term "to find out how it feels."

Michael A. Musmanno, who has sat on the bench of the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court since 1931, peered from behind cell bars and mingled with convicts in the drab-gray uniforms to study conditions at Western Penitentiary.

Next week, he becomes presiding judge of the criminal court.

The jurist, of slight build, bushy-haired and wearing a big black bow tie, got a "prison shave," ate with the prisoners in their mess hall, watched them play baseball and conversed with them.

"I have spoken to hundreds of them," he said. "I want to get their outlook. A judge should know something of the environment and the daily routine of a prison. The complete picture is necessary for an ample understanding of the situation."

Judge Musmanno asserted he planned to spend three days at the penitentiary to make general observations. He said he wanted to spend the nights there, too, but prison officials objected.

At first he intended to go incognito, wearing a convict's uniform, but the judge asserted he decided he might be recognized and fail to gain the results he expects.

The judge observed:

"I have heard some people say prisons are something like country clubs—that many convicts are favored and very well cared for.

"But out of all those I've spoken to here I haven't found one who wanted to stay. The prisons, of course, are not like they were in the medieval days. One must be grateful for that."

Judge Musmanno, a World War veteran, is a graduate of Georgetown and George Washington universities.

Administration Policy on Labor Flayed by Knox

Vice Presidential Nominee Says Government Should Only Be Umpire.

By the Associated Press.

Rocky Point, R. I., Sept. 1.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, asserted today that labor, which "until our time fought its own battles," benefited from staying out of party politics.

He added, in an address at a rally and clambake here, that a Government partial to "one form of labor organization or another" is "un-American."

Knox came to Rhode Island aboard his special campaign train, which set out yesterday from Manchester, N. H., with 22,000 miles of travel in store. Earlier in the day he made rear platform appearances in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

The role of Government in labor relations, Knox said, should be that of "umpire," seeking to "preserve decency and order," and prevent violence. He said, in part:

"What is this Administration's policy toward labor? For more than a half century labor in this country has feared the encroachment of the Federal Government in the relationship between labor and capital. Wisely and properly, labor has realized that a central Government's invasion of this field is a two-edged sword. But the present Administration has rushed into this field.

"The NRA took sides in labor relations, apparently on the side of labor. But actually, the NRA, if its erratic and blundering career had not been stopped, would have bound labor in the chains of Governmental coercion.

"What happened to Italian labor when it helped to establish a governmental dictatorship over all economic life? What happened to German labor unions after they helped to establish the present government? What happened to Russian labor when it established a new system that it thought would give labor all the product of enterprise? Every working man in America should read the story of labor in Europe."

Knox declared the Nation built the "richest and happiest and kindest social order the world has ever known" on a system of "free enterprise" and condemned critics of the system as "apostles of discord."

He said the present Administration was spending $10,000,000 a day more than it was taking in, a sum equal to the annual wages of 9,000 men.

"It would build, every day, about a thousand new and attractive homes," he said. "Since the New Deal began it has spent the equivalent of the wages of about 2,500,000 men working at fair wages for a whole year."

the capital rotunda. Persons passed the bier at a rate of 100 a minute.

At 2 p. m. the capitol doors were locked and the Dern family was left with the body. At 2:40 the casket was delivered into the custody of a military guard. The hearse took the body to the Mormon tabernacle, where the casket was placed at the foot of a pulpit banked solidly with flowers.

President Enters Church.

Fifteen minutes before the services began, President Roosevelt, accompanied by his son, John, and Heber J. Grant, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints (Mormon), entered the tabernacle and was seated.

The Rev. Dr. Elmer I. Goshen, Dern's lifelong friend and pastor of the family's Congregational Church, and the Rev. Jacob Trapp, delivered the eulogy and funeral sermons.

"We're laying the wreath of tender appreciation upon the couch of one whom we have known as neighbor and as friend," Mr. Goshen said.

"For thirty years I have known him intimately, and after all the years I have this to say: George Dern was honest; he was sincere; he was true to his convictions. He was clean in private and in public life. From humble beginnings he climbed to place and power."

Speaking of Dern's appointment to the President's Cabinet, the minister said:

"To this high office he brought a willingness to learn, and an intergrity that no man has ever questioned. To the President and the Administration he has been loyal and true and devoted. And this monument will not perish."

Honorary pallbearers who heard the sermons from seats near the President were Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Acting Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, Acting Secretary of the Navy Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, Chief of Staff Gen. Malin Craig, Gov. Henry H. Blood, Maj. Gen. Simonds and former Gov. George R. Mabey.

Highway patrolmen and Salt Lake City police headed the procession to the cemetery. In order followed the military commander, the military escort, the clergy, the hearse and the mourners. President Roosevelt and other distinguished members of the procession followed. National Guard, Thirty-eighth Infantry and 222d Field Artillery units, in parade equipment, also accompanied the procession.

The President returned immediately to his special train, which left at 6 p. m. (M. S. T.) (9 p. m. E. D. T.) on the final phase of the drought area inspection tour and the President's meeting with Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas Thursday.

Nebraska's Political Outlook at This Time Is Packed With Cross-Currents.

By Franklyn Waltman

OMAHA, NEBR., Sept. 1.—Perhaps there is no State in the country where so many cross-currents have muddied this year's political streams as in Nebraska. This situation is as fascinating as it is unusual, but also it is virtually impossible to gage with any degree of accuracy at this time the ultimate outcome.

WALTMAN.

The Republicans believe they have a real chance to carry Nebraska for Gov. Alf M. Landon and to elect a conservative Republican to the Senate in the place of the progressive George W. Norris. The Democrats shake their heads in despair over the senatorial situation, but they express hope over President Roosevelt's chances.

To an outsider the situation looks like a cross-word puzzle, with some of the letters missing. The Republicans should not count Nebraska in the bag yet—too much depends from their viewpoint on things yet to happen. The Democrats might well make up their minds that they have a hard fight in this State under the most favorable developments.

Here you have the Democrats of the State divided into three warring camps, with the Roosevelt Administration turning thumbs down on the party's senatorial candidate and bringing pressure on a Republican to run against the Democratic nominee. You have the Democratic national committeeman refusing to support the party's senatorial nominee and making cutting remarks about the New Deal—and yet going off East to campaign in behalf of President Roosevelt.

You have public utility interests reportedly doing all they can to get Senator Norris—their bitterest and most effective foe—to seek re-election; and you have bankers trying to keep in the senatorial race the Democratic nominee, Terry Carpenter, demagog and advocate of Townsend pensions. It is all very confusing and yet there is a pattern to it.

For the present the situation revolves around the 74-year-old Norris, past the peak of his political achievements and weary of fighting for the Progressive cause. Personally he is willing—even anxious—to lay aside the cares of public life and retire to this peaceful country for the few years remaining to him.

Yet demands that he run again have been made upon him, not only by his followers in this State but also by President Roosevelt and Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley. There is no doubt that should he seek re-election he would enhance materially President Roosevelt's prospects in Nebraska. At all events, Senator Norris, having bolted his party, will do what he can in behalf of the President—but he would do more if he is an independent candidate for the Senate.

But in making the race Senator Norris runs the risk of crowning his long and shining political career with a defeat at the hands of his own people. Had the Democratic primary several months ago come out differently, the road for the re-election of Senator Norris would have been cleared. But much to everyone's surprise the Democratic nomination was won by Terry Carpenter, who is of the Huey Long type. His appeal is chiefly to the left wing of the Democratic party, the very people on whom Senator Norris must count to win.

Carpenter, who comes from the western end of the State, and from a filling station operator has developed a lucrative general merchandising business—which incidentally is helped, it is said, by his political advertising—is anathema to the Democratic leadership around here. This leadership is politically conservative and although it swallows President Roosevelt it refuses to have anything to do with Carpenter.

Senator Edward R. Burke, who until several weeks ago was the Nebraska Democratic National Committeeman, flatly refused to support Carpenter. He said he would support Norris as an independent if the latter ran. Then Burke denounced some of the New Deal policies and ended up by resigning his National Committee post. He is now said to be in Maine prepared to campaign for President Roosevelt.

The Republicans renominated for the Senate former Representative Robert G. Simmons, a conservative, defeated for the Senate two years ago by Burke by a plurality of 68,000 votes. Without doubt he will receive the vote of the conservative Republicans of the State—and in all probability the vote of many thousands of conservative Democrats. But whether Simmons can win depends on whether Senator Norris enters the race. That is the reason why the public utilities are reported to be doing all they can under cover to get Norris into the race. Not only do they believe it assures the election of Simmons but they see in the defeat of Norris at the hands of his own people a chance for vengeance on one who has harassed them by word and deed. More than that, they see the psychological effect which a stinging defeat of Norris would have.

So far Norris' name has not been entered as an independent candidate. He has taken the stand that at least 40,000 persons should sign the petition to have his name placed on the ballot, although only 1,000 is required.

James Lawrence, Lincoln editor and regarded the Roosevelt leader in the State, is in charge of the Norris petitions. He has refused to divulge how many signatures have been obtained, but it is believed the number is between 30,000 and 40,000 now.

Even though it may mean political suicide for him, Senator Norris will enter the race, it is widely believed here. Most observers feel that if he does and Carpenter stays in the contest, Norris will go down to defeat unless State pride is aroused against such treatment for so old and faithful a public servant. In that event he might win.

The theory that Norris is destined to be defeated in a three-cornered fight is based on the belief that Carpenter will get the left wing Democratic vote and may take some Townsendites among the left-wing Republicans.

Efforts to get Carpenter out of the race have not succeeded and it is known that at least one banker, supporting Simmons, had a hand in persuading him to stay in—on the theory that Simmons cannot win if opposed by Norris alone. Should Norris stay out, it is possible that Carpenter would beat Simmons. Thus the conservative Republicans want a three-cornered fight.

This situation is bound to affect the President's prospects here. Many of the Democrats who will vote for Simmons likewise will vote for Gov. Landon. For the first time in its history the 51-year-old Omaha World-Herald, in whose columns William Jennings Bryan's editorials once appeared, is supporting a Republican Presidential nominee.

It is the largest newspaper in the State and circulates throughout Nebraska. What effects its bolting of the New Deal will have is problematical, but it is interesting that its circulation in July—after its announcement—was the largest for any July in its history. This newspaper was founded by former Democratic Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock. The World-Herald, however, is supporting Democratic Gov. R. L. Cochran for re-election.

Another factor favoring Gov. Landon here is the conservative nature of many of the people, despite the emergence of Bryan here. They take pride in the balanced budget of their State, its absence of any bonded debt, the 20 per cent reduction in taxes made during the depression and the fact that 14 of their counties have taken no Federal relief funds. The Landon record in Kansas is one which appeals to these frugal people. When he recently passed through the State he received a warm welcome, even in Democratic strongholds, it is asserted.

Nevertheless, the Democrats are active in every section and have poured millions of dollars of funds into the State. The President four years ago carried the State by 158,000 majority. He could lose quite a few of these votes and still get Nebraska's seven electoral votes.

'Progressives' To Chart Drive For Roosevelt

LaGuardia, La Follette and Norris Sign Call for Rally at Chicago Sept. 11.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—The New York Times says Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia and other prominent "Progressives" have signed a call for a meeting in Chicago September 11 to organize to support President Roosevelt for re-election.

Other signers of the formal call are given as Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska, Progressive Republican; Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), Washington; A. A. Berle, sr., New York; Edward Keating, editor of Labor; Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the New York State Power Authority, and Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin, Progressive.

The signers of the call, it is said, expect to plan an active campaign in support of Mr. Roosevelt.

LaGuardia, a former Republican, was elected Mayor of New York on the Fusion ticket. He has been at odds with the Republican organization in New York at various times.

The call, according to the Times, was mailed today from Madison, Wis. The letter was said to have read as follows:

"We invite you to attend a representative, non partisan conference of progressive-minded citizens to consider joint action in the vitally important national campaign. The meeting will be held at the Morrison Hotel in Chicago, Ill., Friday, September 11, at 9:30 a. m., Central standard time. In view of the representative character of the conference we urge you to accept and attend. Answer by wire will be appreciated."

Fate Often Aids U. S. Officers in Stemming Illicit Traffic of Ingenious Smugglers.

Bologna and former captain in the Italian army. Before being sentenced, he asked the court to allow him and his family to return to their homeland, where he would enlist for the campaign in Ethiopia. He went, instead, to the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., for eight years.

An explosion, followed by fire, on February 25, 1935, brought screaming fire engines and patrol wagons to an inconspicuous little house on Seymour avenue, the Bronx. Crashing into the basement, firemen found Quinto attempting to extinguish his flaming clothing.

The tenant might have escaped with severe burns, but for one fatal mistake. He told policemen and firemen who rushed to his aid that he preferred not to go to a hospital, that he was "all right."

Yet it was obvious that the man was burned seriously on the arms and body.

Suspicion crystalized when Quinto took aside Police Sergt. James T. Doyle, told him he was chemist seeking to perfect a milk sugar formula and that if the officer divulged his secret activities he (Quinto) and his backers would lose their entire investment.

"Say nothing," advised the middle-aged experimenter, "and take this $500."

Narcotics agents were summoned at once. They found, besides $117,000 worth of morphine, a splendidly established laboratory with the following equipment:

Cutting saws, trays and drying pans, sifting funnels, gas masks, beakers, porcelain filter funnels, mortars and pestles, hack saws, scales, pots, sifters, meat grinders, mixing bowls, evaporating dishes, a porcelain spatula, retort stands, an electric fan, ladles, pans, thermometers, crocks, a kerosene oil heater and a box of empty one-ounce tins.

In the previous six months, investigation disclosed, Quinto had manufactured 2,450 ounces of morphine. The retail value of that amount is more than $300,000. Ingredients were furnished him by two men, whom he said he knew only as Jimmie and Jackie.

Quinto asserted he met them one day when he was making the rounds of downtown New York laboratories attempting to market his own cream of tartar process. Apparently having learned he was a skilled chemist who had been jobless since 1930, they arranged with Quinto to supply him with a certain base which he was to rectify.

The ex-army officer, who was paid $1 an ounce for the finished product, denied he knew the base was opium. According to his story, he didn't know he was manufacturing morphine.

But he pleaded guilty.

Chance took the shape of a traveler's mistake to convict a Midwest drug peddler and put him in the penitentiary for six years.

An Ohio college student, bound home to spend a week-end, accidentally picked up the wrong suitcase when he got off his bus in Columbus. Not until he reached home and opened the case did he discover this was someone else's property. These clothes were not his and—what was this? A package stamped "Heroin."

The student notified the Federal officers who, by laundry marks and other telltale insignia on the wearing apparel, located the suitcase's owner at Louisville.

Chance had less to do with the apprehension and conviction of Pak Ho Biong. Fish put him behind the bars—salted codfish.

Pak Ho Biong had been a captain in the Korean Salvation Army before he came to Hawaii to peddle brooms and salt fish to all who would buy and smoking opium to those he could trust.

Narcotics agents in Honolulu, headquarters of the bureau's fifteenth district, became aware of his illicit business a year and a half ago and paid Pak Ho Biong a visit. They found nine tins of opium, all smelling strongly of fish, secreted in the house.

The popular merchant, it seemed, was having the drug smuggled to him from Korea and Japan in fish barrels. After serving part of a penitentiary sentence, he was deported.

Dope rinners have tried, and are still trying, to squeeze their product into this country in hollow heels of shoes, fountain pens, Bibles, auto cushions and even coffins. Customs and narcotics agents have removed heroin from hub caps, cocaine from candlesticks and morphine from bon bons.

Stuart J. Fuller, assistant chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs, State Department, and an expert on the international traffic, contributes a few examples of ingenuity.

"In one case," he says, "live turtles had been shipped in open tanks full of water. The ship's carpenter, desiring to give the turtles a change of water, undertook to bore holes in the tubs to let the foul water escape.

"What did he find? The staves had been hollowed out and the hollow spaces packed with drugs.

"An apparently innocent shipment of ozokerite, a mineral wax, was found upon examination by customs officers to be a mixture of heroin and paraffin wax. All that the smuggler had to do after delivery of his ozokerite was to submit it to a simple chemical process which would precipitate out his heroin ready for sale. This discovery involved the co-operation of five governments.

"Not long ago a caravan of camels arrived at the Egyptian land frontier. They carried no burdens, but it was explained that they were being brought to Egypt for sale. The officer in charge of the customs patrol was fond of animals. He went up to the camel and stroked it.

"On the camel's hump he felt something which did not seem to be camel. Examination disclosed that places had been shaved in the heavy hair on the camel's humps, bricks of hashish (marihuana) had been glued in these places and hair had been glued over the bricks."

The increasing use of ships' personnel, white-collar workers as well as tough-looking seamen, as carriers in the international dope-smuggling racket prompted Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger to recommend still stricter surveillance of docked steamers in his annual report for 1935.

"The ease with which all sorts of persons can gain access to vessels in port greatly facilitates the trafficker in placing his contraband on board in the charge of crew members and in obtaining delivery at ports of destination," he states.

"From information received, it is thought that the further assistance of Government authorities is needed to enforce surveillance in ports. While some steamship companies keep a fairly careful watch on their ships in port, others do not, and this is a circumstance which the American authorities are obliged to take into account when they are applied to for mitigation of the fines which automatically attach to a vessel on which unmanifested drugs are found."

Eternal vigilance is the byword in Uncle Sam's unremitting drive on dope.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—Charges by Representative Robert L. Bacon, of New York, that the committees of one, organized at the suggestion of President Roosevelt, were coercing voters, brought a sharp denial tonight from Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri.

In a statement released by the Democratic National Committee, Clark called the charges "the most preposterous and absurd emanations to appear in print since Gutenberg first invented movable type."

"The indignation of Mr. Bacon must afford genuine amusement in a year when it is well understood that the Hanna-McKinley campaign has been taken as a model, when the biggest campaign fund in the history of the country is being raised and when big business is actively threatening men recently put back to work under Roosevelt prosperity with the loss of their jobs if they dare vote the Democratic ticket," Clark said.

New York, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, in a letter to the Progressive Republican Committee for Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight, said it "seems highly necessary that the President be re-elected in the interest of a progressive and liberal government."

"I have learned enough about the campaign to know what an unfair and vicious campaign is being made against the President," Couzens wrote.

Couzens, who recently threw his support behind the Democratic campaign, said he would consider the committee's invitation to address a mass meeting in New York next month.

Waterville, Me., Sept. 1 (AP).—Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, Union Party Presidential candidate, said today a nation cannot "maintain a high standard of living when it forces its people to compete with the low standards of Orientals."

Carrying his campaign into Maine, Lemke asserted in an address prepared for delivery here that "the policies of the present Administration have resulted in a tremendous curtailment of production in this country with the result that we are forced to buy large quantities of foodstuffs and manufactered articles abroad.

"Naturally, we pay cash for these purchases and, at the same time, cannot collect on our indebtedness from many of these nations from whom vast purchases are made."

The only end for such a course, the speaker argued, is bankruptcy.

Fargo, N. Dak., Sept. 1 (AP).—United States Senator Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota Republican, said in an interview today he would continue his "hands off" policy so far as the Presidential campaign is concerned.

"Up to the present I have made no commitment so far as the Presidency is concerned, and nothing has happened up to this moment to cause me to change that course. It is my present intention to continue that course," said the Senator.

"I am going into the State campaign in North Dakota, prepared to give every measure of support that I can to the candidacy of the Republican nominee for Governor, Walter Welford."

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP).—Robert Kratky, director of the taxpayers' division of the Republican National Committee, said today the average man and woman are touched by 2,700 "hidden taxes" daily.

Kratky, in a statement released by the committee, estimated 1,200 taxes were imposed on articles figuring in a man's daily life, while 1,500 levies touched his wife and their household.

U. S. Ship Unit Acts to Restrict Trade to Spain

Board Asks 2 Debtor Lines to Shun Shipments to 'Dangerous' Ports.

By the Associated Press.

Anxious to keep American merchant vessels from becoming involved in an incident like the attempted bombing of the destroyer Kane, the United States Shipping Board moved yesterday to discourage shipments to "dangerous" Spanish ports.

A request that shipping lines indebted to the board refrain from accepting cargoes for such ports was made by S. D. Schell, assistant director of the Shipping Board Bureau.

He estimated that from six to eight ships in which the board is interested financially usually are in the Mediterranean.

Have Legal Right.

The lines operating these vessels have a legal right to carry out existing contracts for delivery of cargoes in any Spanish ports where an effective blockade has not been established, Scheel said, "but what we want them to do is not to accept any more cargoes for dangerous ports."

"I think the lines are being very cautious," he added.

Commanders of vessels which the Shipping Board itself operates through the Mediterranean to India, without stops at Spanish ports, have been instructed to "watch their step," Schell said.

Two Companies Involved.

The companies which operate ships to Spanish ports, which are indebted to the Shipping Board as the result of ship construction or ship purchase loans, are the American Export Line of New York and the Ykes Bros.-Ripley Steamship Co. of New Orleans.

Both have been required by the board to take out war risk insurance on vessels in which the Government is financially interested. Ships of the American Export Line have rescued a large number of American refugees from Spain.

Attack on Kane

Spanish undersecretary of state Monday afternoon.

"The undersecretary of state expressed the profound regret of his government that this attack should have been made upon any American ship, regardless of whether it was made by a government plane or a rebel plane," Wendelin reported. "He promised that an immediate investigation would be made by the ministeries of war and marine to establish whether this plane could have been a government plane."

No Plane of Such Type.

The State Department reported the undersecretary telephoned Monday night to Wendelin to inform him that the minister of state had conferred personally with the commander of the government air forces and was able to state categorically that no government planes were operating in the area where the incident occurred. He said that, moreover, the Spanish government possessed no planes of the type which made the attack.

The attacking plane was described as a low-winged tri-motored monoplane.

"The undersecretary added," Wendelin reported, "that instructions had been given some time ago to all armed forces of the government to respect all foreign vessels.

"He expressed the appreciation of the Spanish government for the friendly tone of the American Government's communication and promised a formal reply very shortly."

Consul Bay reported that Gen. de Llano "immediately expressed his regret that this incident had occurred to an American vessel."

"The general professed no knowledge whatsoever of the incident and called his chief of staff and aviation liason officer, who likewise had no information. Gen. Queipo de Llano said he would investigate the matter with the authorities in Tetuan and then transmit all information to Gen. France.

"He said that appropriate instructions would be given his air forces cautioning them to respect all American vessels in all circumstances."

Early yesterday morning, the State Department announced the general assured Consul Bay that every one of his aviators had already been carefully instructed "in the foregoing sense." He again expressed regrets, the announcement said.

Meanwhile, it was expected that American ships sent to Spain to rescue United States citizens will be withdrawn very soon. The battleship Oklahoma already has left. This leaves one cruiser, two destroyers and a Coast Guard cutter still in Spanish waters.

The government defenders, garbed for the most part in working clothes and white shirts, made easy targets for rebel machine gunners.

Within the city itself, the defenders carried out their threat to chain hostages in the streets if the rebels should recommence the weeks-old bombardment.

One of these shackled prisoners was the Bishop of Valladolid who, it was reported, asked that his hands be left free so that he might pray.

The knowledge that their own men would be brought out for them to kill delayed the rebel bombardment, but reports the government forces had executed other hostages precipitated the renewal of hostilities.

Airplanes bombed Irun and the defenders' fortress at San Marchal.

Artillery battered the government men on the hilltops and machine guns streaked death at those in the redoubts.

Government planes overhead were doing their best to disperse rebel columns.

Government machine gun nests pitted the slopes against the attackers and on one sally a hail of bullets cut down an attacking group only 25 feet from the gun. In some places there was not much more space than that separating whole lines of opposing forces.

Hardly had the city awoke before the buildings and houses were shaken by the incessant explosions of rebel shells. Water and gas reservoirs were demolished.

Houses in Hendaye shook with detonations of the shots across the frontier.

Pirouetting in deadly maneuvers, rebel planes played tag with anti-aircraft batteries. So far as could be learned, none of the rebel planes was hit, although the batteries fired round after round.

Government militar leaders believed the rebel attack was directed by Gen. Emilio Mola, commander of the northern rebel forces.

As the fighting raged on unabated, dead and wounded lay all about, but nobody would venture an estimate of the day's casualties.

Bombs Wreck Hospital.

Burgos, Spain, Sept. 1.—The first government air raid on rebel headquarters here and bombardment of a rebel hospital, with four dead and 23 injured, roused rebels to angry protest tonight to the International Red Cross at Geneva.

Rebel generals, in a telegram to Geneva, asserted the hospital, wrecked by the air bombardment, displayed clearly its Red Cross insignia.

Four bombs were dropped, courtyard, limped hastily to cover Patients, out for an airing in the as the projectiles fell. Hundreds were knocked down. Windows were smashed. Two operating rooms were wrecked.

A wounded officer snarled: "It can't be Spaniards who do this! It must be mad men!"

The bombing squadron dropped explosives into Madrid streets for three-quarters of an hour before anti-aircraft and machine gun batteries repelled it, the ministry of war announced.

Warned by screaming sirens and the criss-cross of powerful searchlights against the night sky, frightened residents, many of them aroused from sleep, scurried for subway stations and basements.

The government announced no one was injured and no serious damage was done, but emergency plans were hurried to protect the city from the recurring bombardments.

Population Put on Guard.

Besides aircraft detectors, searchlights and anti-aircraft artillery, which already had been installed, the government put the population on guard.

Loud speakers were erected at populous centers to signal warnings as soon as the detectors pick up the distant drone of the warplanes. Street cars were equipped with small green lights invisible from the air, and general orders were issued for all residents to seek shelter in basements, subways and lower floors at the first warning.

Special details of repair men were placed on constant duty to repair possible breaks in electric cables, gas and water mains.

Cabinet Shake-Up Impends.

Reorganization of the cabinet to give representation to additional factions of the Popular Front political coalition was reported under consideration.

(An uncensored dispatch from Madrid, relayed by courier to Hendaye, France, estimated casualties of the first five weeks of the civil war at from 75,000 to 100,000 dead and about 300,000 wounded. Official circles were understood to admit privately the war dead total is in the neighborhood of 85,000. Many smaller towns have been virtually depopulated through executions and losses in battle by both sides.

Alcazar Is Mined.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Toledo, Spain, Sept. 1.—Government defenders of the City of Toledo tonight prepared to dynamite the famous fortress of the Alcazar if the 1,700 besieged rebels—men, women and children—within its crumbling walls do not surrender.

While government artillery kept pounding away at the massive fortress, the occupants of which have held out against a six-week siege, tunnelers dug under the sides and laid heavy dynamite mines.

Within a week 20 tons of dynamite will have been placed and wired for simultaneous firing, leaders said. When the mines are completed the rebels will be given their last opportunity to surrender.

To Give Them Choice.

From loud speakers edged close to the walls of the fortress, government officials will call upon the besieged to lay down their arms and march out.

If the rebels refuse, a button will be pressed and the historic building will be blown to bits.

The fortress, a cadet school since 1882, was seized by Fascist sympathizers as a place of refuge at the outset of hostilities. Men, women and children fled to it, and since it has been bombarded almost continually.

Mexican Aid Defended.

Mexico City, Sept. 1 (AP).—With United States Ambassador Josephus M. Daniels in the gallery, the President of the Mexican Congress tonight defended the recent shipment of munitions from Mexico to the Spanish Madrid government.

Diplomats Fail At Mediation In Spanish War

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Sept. 1.—Efforts, said to have been undertaken by Latin-American diplomats to mediate in the Spanish civil war, were reported tonight to have failed.

It was understood the first proposal—which some quarters hoped might be the opening wedge in bringing about an armistice—was that a pledge be made by rebels to refrain from shelling Irun and San Sebastian. The suggestion back of that proposal was that both were open towns.

It was emphasized here that British officials were not participating in the negotiations, reported to have occurred at Hendaye. British officials regarded the negotiations as premature.

The British cabinet, meeting tomorrow morning, is expected to deal with other phases of the Spanish situation, viewed as the most urgent problem facing the government.

Reds Increase Army.

Moscow Sept. 1 (AP).—The Red army's strength was brought to 1,600,000 today, when the entire class of 1914 and half of the 1915 class were called to the colors.

It represented a total of 900,000 recruits, but was a net gain in strength of only 300,000. Six hundred thousand men in the previous class will be released when the 1914 class reports.

Calling of the 1914 class—men born in that year—was a routine, seasonal measure.

Court to Decide Oxon Hill Rule On Flag Salute

Local Lawyers Announce Mandamus Request to Be Filed Shortly.

For the first time in the history of a State that cherishes the principle of religious tolerance, a Maryland court will be asked to decide whether a public school student may refuse to salute the American flag because of religious beliefs.

The case is that of the four children of August L. Lutke, of Oxon Hill, Md., who were expelled from the Oxon Hill School when they refused to acknowledge the national emblem.

Attorneys Edmund Campbell and Frederick Ballard, of Washington, retained by Lutke, announced last night they would file mandamus proceedings in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court within a few days.

The writ will attempt to compel the county school board to allow Fred Lutke, 12; Louis, 10; Walter, 8, and Esther, 7, to re-enter the school this month, on the basis their dismissal was illegal.

Speaking for the law firm, Campbell declared expulsion of the children, which took place at a board meeting last June 9, "is a violation of the Constitution, which guarantees freedom of religious convictions."

He said it was his belief that the State school law, under which the disciplinary action was taken, does not apply in this case. The law reads:

"It shall be the duty of the boards of education to prepare for the use of the public schools of the State a program providing for the salute to the flag, and such other patriotic exercises from time to time as may be deemed by them to be expedient and, under such regulations and instruction as may best meet the various requirements of the different grades in such schools."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lutke remained silent on the subject last night, leaving all statements for their attorneys. They are members of the religious sect known as "Jehovah's Witnesses."

The children have steadfastly maintained that their parents have left the matter of saluting the flag entirely up to their own discretion. But to salute, they say, "would be bowing before another God."

Principal William T. Jobe, of the Oxon Hill School, discovered last winter that they were not fulfilling this part of each morning's patriotic program requirements. By order of Nicholas Orem, county school superintendent, they were segregated during this period each day, but no official action was taken until the close of school.

The county school board, however, held its first meeting on the problem May 26. At this meeting the board members found themselves stalemated between the free State's tradition of religious tolerance and the heretofore uninterrupted school law.

Neither was the board at that time able to say that the State law, which made the morning flag exercises compulsory, provided penalties.

Other States which have been faced with similar problems, brought up by the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, are Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio and California. In Massachusetts two school children were sentenced to a "training school."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Community Center Department and Office of National Capital Parks present the Tempo Choral Society (W. Scott Mayo, director) as the twelfth and last summer attraction at the Sylvan Theater. Program of traditional and arranged Negro spirituals and original songs by Henry T. Burleigh, Nathaniel Dett, Hall Johnson, Will Cook and other composers.

Delectable weather favored the close, as it did the beginning, of the series of summer entertainments which have drawn many Washingtonians and visitors to the Sylvan Theater. Last night's audience was of the usual generous dimensions, massed compactly in the reserved section and scattered down the grassy slope of the Monument monticule.

Dr. Mayo evidently has been putting his choir of some 50 mixed voices through vigorous training, for the singing showed considerable improvement since the Tempo Choral Society made its appearance under similar auspices a year ago. The tone was firmer and stronger, the parts were more closely integrated, and the dynamic shadings in better control.

While listening to a program of this character, almost entirely devoted to music of Afro-American provenance, one was struck afresh by the fact that the Negro spirituals constitute one of the finest bodies of folk songs in the world. Their predominant dignity, their emotional sincerity and their melodic beauty stamp them with a peculiar significance.

How far back these songs began to appear cannot be determined. It will always be a matter for regret that no attempt was made to collect them before the War Between the States, because many of them must have been irretrievably lost. It was not until 1871 that the Fisk Jubilee Singers made the spirituals known outside the South and spread them as far as Europe.

Last night's program contained some which have become thoroughly established in universal popularity, such as "Deep River," "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen," "Oh, Lord, I've Done Done," "Weeping Mary" and "Every Time I Feel the Spirit."

William Ames Fisher's choral arrangement of the largo from Dvorak's E minor symphony bids fair to assume status as a spiritual. Any day now the false traditions may arise that, regardless of chronology, Dvorak borrowed the themes from Fisher. If this does come to pass, it will be in keeping with the other mistaken impression that Dvorak deliberately used Negro melodies in that symphony.

A. F. G. E. Drive To Oust Units At Rally Likely

Fight on 'New Deal' Lodges Forecast as Conservative Leaders Confer.

A vigorous drive by leaders of the conservative wing of the American Federation of Government Employes to rally sufficient strength for the convention next month at Detroit to oust leftist lodges was forecast last night after a caucus of conservative leaders at the Hotel Hamilton.

Michael D. Schafer, vice president and one of the four members of the national executive council whose recall is being sought by the so-called "New Deal" lodges, was chosen floor manager of the conservative convention forces.

Assisting him will be John Dwyer, president of AAA Lodge, No. 116.

Resolution Passed.

While the caucus was selecting Schaefer and Dwyer as their convention leaders, in an adjoining room at a meeting of the AAA lodge the conservative bloc of the lodge, led by Dwyer, pushed through a resolution indorsing the four council members whose recall is being sought and assailing the leftist lodges for "constantly embarrassing, harassing and obstructing the program of unity of this federation."

Pheceding the vote on the resolution an attempt by the Dwyer-led bloc to have fiv edelegates sent to the convention instead of three, as decided at a previous meeting, was defeated. Besides Dwyer, the AAA delegates to the convention will be John Muzzey and Roland Adkins.

The caucus of conservative leaders was called, it was learned, to map the strategy for a final preconvention drive to swing as many doubtful votes to the conservative standard as possible. The drive, which is to be launched immediately, was thought to be the conservatives' answer to the vote registered by leftist and liberal lodges at Friday's meeting of the District department, at which the conservatives were blocked in their efforts to oust the "new deal" lodges.

The department meeting vote was taken on a roll-call and, it was learned, the conservatives plan to conduct a person-by-person drive to swing as many of Friday's "anti" votes to the support of Col. Charles I. Stengle, their candidate for president.

Representatives of Justice Lodge 21, which was suspended by the executive council several months ago for picketing the Federal Bureau of Investigation in protest against the alleged anti-unionism of J. Edgar Hoover, announced last night that Charlton Ogburn, the A. F. G. E. attorney, had promised the lodge a hearing before the full executive council on September 11.

"No Change in Stand."

Justice Lodge representatives hailed this promise as proof that the council had "backed down" and as an "admission that the council has not previously given the lodge a hearing," as provided for by the constitution. From one council member, however, it was learned that the council had not changed its stand and was determined to expel the unit at the convention.

It was pointed out that even if the lodge won a preliminary injunction at the hearing before Justice James M. Proctor in District Supreme Court today, the lodge still would not be seated. The injunction would bind only five members of the council, it was said, leaving the remaining ten members—sufficient to suspend the lodge—free to do as they saw fit.

Man Admits Killing Aged Ohio Widow

By the Associated Press.

Van Wert, Ohio, Sept. 1.—Prosecutor S. S. Beard announced that a 28-year-old odd-job man confessed today that 18 months ago he killed his former employer, an aged, wealthy woman.

Loris Longanecker admitted the sensational slaying in a written statement, the prosecutor said. The victim was Mrs. Mary Jane Woodruff, 85-year-old widow and one of Van Wert's most prominent citizens.

Prosecutor Beard said he would ask a special grand jury Thursday to return a first degree murder indictment against Longanecker.

Sheriff R. B. Stevens and Patrolman John O. Miller said they obtained the statement from Longanecker after he had pleaded guilty to an assault charge and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

Mrs. Woodruff was strangled to death in her fashionable home, her arms and hands bound with silk hose and rags stuffed into her mouth.

Dr. Gerstenfeld Appeals to Jews To Join Church

Washington Congregation's Junior Rabbi Asserts Religion Is Need.

Dr. Norman Gerstenfeld, junior rabbi of Washington Hebrew Congregation, yesterday issued an appeal to members of the Jewish faith to join the congregation, which is conducting a membership campaign. Dr. Gerstenfeld based his appeal on the need for religion in everyday life.

"Men today need morale as much as they need bread," said Dr. Gerstenfeld. "Everywhere we meet discouraged, depressed souls who speak with gloom of the dark hours facing them and the world today. They lament the seemingly insuperable problems facing us, and litical problems facing us, and among our Jews there are many today who wring their hands at the specter of religious prejudices the bigoted Nazis are trying to disseminate to the uninformed, confused souls of the world; and they view with horror the news that even in this country there are demagogues like Father Coughlin who are stooping to ignorant hatred.

"All men need religion today because they need courage. Religion teaches us that in every life and in every age there are emergencies that require the emergence of new courage and new skill. Religion inspires the souls of men to face life with good will toward our fellow men and with the morale to face temporary defeats without despair. Relgion shows us that the world was never made for cowards or weaklings but only for the man with strength of character. Religion is, therefore, the greatest need of the gloomy world today.

"The Washington Hebrew Congregation, whose senior minister is the beloved Dr. Abram Simon, is therefore now launching a membership campaign prior to the high holidays, which begin this year on the evening of September 16. It invites unaffiliated members of the Jewish faith to join the temple, the exponent of the ancient ideals of Israel to fit modern life, and to find in its program of activities the new hope and morale and moral idealism to face the world of our day."

A membership committee is meeting daily to enroll the new members so as to make sure the unaffiliated can now join without the confusion of a last minute affiliation and to insure adequate facilities at the temple for every new member during the high holidays.

Two Detectives To Face Charge Of Gun Lending

Mansfield and Dalstrom Accused of Giving Pistols to Civilians.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday announced that Detective Sergt. A. D. Mansfield and Precinct Detective Elmer Dalstrom were slated for trial board action in connection with the lending of two pistols to civilians.

Brown said that during the Shrine convention in 1935, Mansfield and Dalstrom each loaned a pistol to John S. and Logan O. Wilton, 24-year-old twins, who were employed as special policemen for the convention.

A few days ago the Wilton twins were arrested on charges of impersonating officers and carrying concealed weapons. It was found that the weapons were those loaned by the detectives more than a year ago.

Brown said the weapons involved were not the property of the Police Department but belonged to the detectives.

Although formal charges have not been filed, Maj. Brown said the detectives would be cited before the trial board next week.

"Loaning or securing weapons for civilians is strictly against police regulations," Brown said.

Public Power Debate Slated At Parley Here

Utility Spokesmen, Federal Speakers Will Debate Yardstick Projects.

By the United Press.

Sharp differences of opinion over the advantages of private and public ownership of electric and gas utilities will be aired before the Third World Power Conference here next week.

The controversial subjects of the merits of holding companies and "yardstick" regulation will be featured in the discussions of utility development by leading authorities from all parts of the world.

Conference officials said last night papers have been prepared by American experts to present both sides of the controversy over private and Government ownership of utilities.

Those written by Government officials warn that utilities must change their course or fail, they said, while those prepared by utility executives challenge New Deal policies as wasteful and needless.

To Defend Holding Companies.

J. F. Fogarty, president of the North America Co., will argue that the aid of holding companies has been and is still vital in the operation of utilities.

On the other hand, Judge Robert E. Healy, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, presents caustic criticism of the conduct of holding companies and challenges the utility industry to devote "itself more to the production and sale of gas and electricity and less to the production and sale of securities."

Government development of such projects as the Tennessee Valley Authority as a "yardstick" for electricity rates will be criticized as inaccurate and unfair because of divergent operating conditions by John E. Zimmerman, president of the United Gas Improvement Co.

Such developments, he contends, show lack of faith in utility regulation by State and local commissions which he asserts has been satisfactory to the public interest.

His position will be challenged by James C. Bonbright, of the New York power authority, who praises the development of "yardsticks" and contends the public in many cases has lost faith in local regulatory commissions.

Addresses prepared by experts from the 50 other nations whose representatives will convene here next Monday reveal that pyramiding of holding companies as in the United States is almost unparalleled elsewhere, officials said. Holding companies in other countries have been limited to two or three layers, they said.

Chinese City Fights Communist Army

Lanchow, China, Sept. 1 (AP).—Battle with modern weapons of war was raging tonight in a medieval setting at Minhsien, obscure Kansu Province city, south of here.

Word direct from the scene of conflict disclosed the city still was in the hands of its provincial defenders, but that attacking Communists were taking a heavy toll.

The aviators, returning, said that half of Minhsien was burned but that the defenders signaled they had enough food to withstand a month's siege.

The chapter also announced classes in home hygiene and care of the sick, on the following schedules: 10 a. m. Mondays and Wednesdays, starting September 9; 2 p. m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting September 8, and 4:30 p. m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting September 8.

Congressmen, Governor Lead New Mexico Poll

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Sept. 1 (AP). Representative J. J. Dempsey and New Mexico's incumbent United States Senators and Governor were nominated unanimously here today after Dempsey and Gov. Clyde Tingley patched up their political differences outside the State convention hall.

Senator Carl Hatch was selected for the long term and Senator Dennis Chavez, appointed to fill the seat left vacant by the death of Bronson M. Cutting, Republican, was named for the short term.

Play by D'Annunzio Assailed by Archbishop

Rome, Sept. 1 (AP).—Gabriele d'Annunzio was attacked anew by the church today Archbishop Antonio Anastasio Rossi, Patriarch of Constantinople and prelate of Pompeii, September 16.

The archbishop called d'Annunzio "the too well-known poet" and referred to the play as "pagan licentiousness." He forbade Catholics to attend it.

RA Program Curtailed

which 75 per cent of RA personnel is now employed, will be hard hit by the cuts. Last year 300,000 farm families were carried through the winter on an average $300 loan basis, and another 300,000 families were carried by RA relief grants. The Tugwell agency had planned to make loans this year to at least 150,000 of the families formerly on a grant basis. This plan has been abandoned. Small direct grants will be made instead. "Supplementary" loans, with about $75 as a maximum, will be made to the 300,000 families which received $300 loans last year, and no additional loan accounts will be opened. The RA estimates it will "save" $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 by not making additional rehabilitation loans. Officials estimated that about 70 per cent of loans made will be recoverable to the Treasury.

Staffs Being Cut.

Both the Washington and field staffs of the Resettlement Administration are being cut down gradually. Although August personnel figures were not obtainable, it was estimated the total on RA rolls had dropped to about 15,500 from 16,200 in the previous month. In the preceding three months, about 1,500 employes were released, or an average of 500 a month.

Two Maryland resettlement projects were in the last of 30 on which plans were abandoned yesterday—Cumberland Valley farms and Garrett farms.

Other approved projects on the abandoned list disclosed yesterday were:

Injunctions Sought.

Resettlement projects are of four types—subsistence homesteads, integrated rural communities, infiltration projects and suburban resettlement. Four of the suburban type had been contemplated originally. Work on one, at Round Brook, N. J., was stopped after injunction proceedings and several realty and loan organizations in Milwaukee are trying to enjoin completion of one there.

Infiltration projects are those, not of the community type, where the RA acquires farms and settles destitute farmers upon them. An extensive infiltration program has been contemplated and some 550,000 acres of land had been optioned. But on such of these projects as have entailed no construction to date, the RA plans to go forward with only about 170,000 acres on which the Government actually is obligated by acceptance of options.

Only a modicum of funds will be spent on these projects—sufficient to make them habitable for farm "clients" the RA plans to resettle. Although in a technical sense the RA plans to resettle some 55 additional of these infiltration projects, where they have land commitments, the original scope has been cut by more than half. Strictly, the projects will not be "completed" as originally planned.

For example, three migratory labor camps had been approved for California, to accommodate some 2,000 transients. Arrangements are being made to combine two or more of these, to accommodate only 1,000.

Nowhere does the RA plan to initiate any "new" projects. Few RA officials hold any real hope for further substantial appropriations next session of Congress and the RA atmosphere now is one of limited completion, rather than ambitious expansion. Such new work as is being undertaken is of an emergency nature in the drought area.

Plasterers Reject Strike Peace Plan

The local plasterers union, members of which went on strike two weeks ago at the new Interior Department Building, last night voted down a proposal from their international president in New York that work be resumed on the old wage scale of $1.50 an hour.

The men struck for $1.75 an hour. At their meeting last night, various speakers insisted this wage was due them. At the same time, they said acceptance of anything less would set a dangerous precedent.

In an agreement between the local union and the Employing Plasterers Association last May, it was decided the hourly wage would be increased from $1.50 to $1.75 on August 15. The new wage, according to the plasterers, went into effect on that date on all union jobs here except the Interior Building and the Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanatarium.

Price Urges Voters To Back Roosevelt

Speaking before a crowd of 700 at a Young Democratic Club rally at Fairfax, Va., last night, Lieut. Gov. James H. Price urged the re-election of President Roosevelt and flayed the "apathetic attitude" of Virginians toward the election.

The Lieutenant Governor said one of the greatest needs of the State was to increase the electorate. It was the duty of the Young Democratic Clubs, he said, to get the people to the polls.

Price compared conditions today with those existing four years ago and cited figures which, he said, proved the economic gains effected by the New Deal. The crowning achievement of the Roosevelt Administration, he said, was its desire "to give our people a more abundant life."

Charles Schaffner, War Veteran, Dead

Charles H. Schaffner, 42, World War veteran and Department of Justice clerk, died at Emergency Hospital yesterday after a long illness resulting from war injuries.

Mr. Schaffner was born in New York City, coming to Washington about 20 years ago. His only close surviving relative is a brother, Earl Schaffner, of this city.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Hysong's undertaking establishment. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

WPA Service Is Propaganda, G. O. P. Claims

Committee Cites Memorandum to Information Unit to Prove Assertions.

By the Associated Press.

The Republican National Committee yesterday said a confidential memorandum issued to WPA's information service showed the New Deal has set up "a great propaganda machine" at public expense to seek President Roosevelt's re-election.

"If Mr. Roosevelt wants to treat the public fairly in this matter, let him tell what it costs to carry on this propaganda service," the committee added in a statement.

"Let him reveal, indeed, the extent that we have Government by propaganda today. Government by propaganda is the hand-maiden of European regimentation; the question still is how far the New Dealers intend to carry free America in their program of regimentation."

The committee said the WPA memorandum was issued last March marked "not for release." It directed each State WPA Administrator to "survey his facilities for the distribution of information, and to supplement such facilities sufficiently to provide an adequate information service," the Republican statement asserted.

Lists Projects.

Making public what it said was a list of the State directors of Federal writers' projects, the committee called their activities "one of the neatest projects for spreading New Deal poison gas that the mind of man has conceived."

In another statement the committee said the drought conference which President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon are to attend Thursday in Des Moines "will be told how, under Gov. Landon's direction, ponds were made by constructing little dams on small streams to alleviate the Kansas drought in 1934.

Praises Landon Projects.

"The round table conference will show how Kansas farmers were supplied water by Gov. Landon when normal supplies were dried up by the searing sun," this statement said.

Representative Hope, of Kansas, said in the statement that Landon's prompt action "not only softened the blow of disaster to the farmers of that State that year, but resulted in Kansans weathering the drought this year more successfully than any of their neighbors in the drought area."

He said several thousand farm ponds have been constructed under [illegible] supervision through the WPA in the State, and "the WPA has adopted the Governor's program on farm and garden ponds in toto."

Pardon Ready For Ex-Convict Held Innocent

Man Who Faced Chair 7 Times in N. C. May Receive $1,500.

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 1.—Gov. Ehringhaus signed a full pardon August 5 for Gus Colin Langley, who seven times faced electrocution on a murder charge in North Carolina before he was paroled, but formal issuance was withheld pending a report from New Jersey officials on Langley's conduct in recent months.

Parole Commissioner Edwin Gill disclosed the Governor's action today in a statement in which he gave his approval to a movement launched at Asheboro to ask the Legislature to pay $1,500 to Langley, who now lives in Morristown, N. J., for the time he spent in prison and the work he did as a prisoner.

Langley was convicted of the murder of Lonnie C. Russell in Asheville on September 27, 1932, in a filling station holdup. Wilcey Johnson, implicated in the case, was tried, but a mistrial resulted and he was not tried again.

Paroled in 1934.

The commutation and parole followed an inquiry by Gill. Langley's sentence was commuted on September 7, 1933, and he was paroled October 31, 1934.

The commissioner said that Langley's parole had been "liberally construed," and added it was not revoked though Langley had been indicted for nonsupport of his wife at Wilmington.

Gill said he thought the proposal to pay Langley $1,500 "reasonable" in view of the "mental and physical torture involved in serving on death row, together with the actual labor performed by Langley for the State." He added he tried to place Langley in a highway job when he was paroled, but was unsuccessful.

Believes Him Innocent.

The Governor expressed the belief Langley was innocent of the Russell slaying. Gill said, but in granting a parole instead of pardon sought "to place about Langley the influence of friends who would aid him in his rehabilitation." First paroled in New Hanover County, Langley was later put under E. D. Ballentine, commissioner of public safety of Irvington, N. J. Gill wrote Ballentine on August 21 asking for information on which formally to issue the pardon but had not received an answer today.

Gov. Ehringhaus would make no comment on the case.

Washington Crash Victim Dies In Hospital at Hagerstown

Injuries to Navy Worker Prove Fatal; Nephew Killed in Accident.

Frank Hartswick, 23, of 1933 Fourth street northeast, died in Washington County Hospital at Hagerstown, Md., yesterday of injuries suffered in an automobile crash near there Monday. Hartswick's nephew, Jack O. Weakland, 20, died at the hospital a few hours after the accident.

Hartswick, an apprentice machinist at the Navy Yard, was returning from a week-end visit with his family at Altoona, Pa., when his car, driven by Weakland, smashed head-on against a machine driven by Paul Moore, 23, of Hagerstown. Moore was only slightly injured.

Weakland, whose home was in Altoona, died of a fractured skull. Hartswick of internal injuries. Officers said there was evidence that Weakland fell asleep at the wheel and swerved against Moore's car.

Hartswick, who had been employed at the Navy Yard for nearly two years, leaves a wife and two small children, May, 18 months, and Donald, 6 months. He also leaves two brothers in Washington, John R. and Lester G. Hartswick.

The funeral will probably be held in Altoona.

The reported agreement was said to have been gained by a committee of lawyers representing the claimants in conference with the company.

Similarly the company and the lawyers were stated to have agreed on a payment of about $342,000 for settlement of claims arising out of the sinking of the S. S. Mohawk off the New Jersey Coast January 24, 1935.

Strike of Guild Settled by News At Milwaukee

Workers Gain 5-Day Week and New Wage Set-Up as Long Dispute Is Ended.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Sept. 1.—John H. Black, manager of the Wisconsin News, Milwaukee paper, announced today that "the strike involving certain members of the editorial department of the Wisconsin News which has been in progress since February 17 has been settled."

The strike was called by the Wisconsin News unit of the American Newspaper Guild. The plant has been picketed since February 17, but the paper, owned by William Randolph Hearst, has published continuously.

The controversial points pertaining to the signing of a contract and recognition were not a part of the settlement," said Black's statement.

"Wages and working conditions are highly satisfactory to all concerned. The striking employes will be on the ... Wednesday."

Black s[aid] 12 of the original 21 strikers w[ere] returning to work. He said some of the others previously had returned and that others had found work elsewhere.

Guild's Demands.

The original guild demands included minimum wages scaled from $30 to $70 a week according to duration of employment; a five-day week; graduated vacations; dismissal bonuses; a closed guild shop with the checkoff system for payment of dues.

About six weeks after the strike was called, the three leading Milwaukee newspapers including the Wisconsin News all announced new employment policies which included revised minimum wages, vacations with pay and dismissal bonuses. It was stated at the time that these policies were not the result of negotiations.

Black said today that "Milwaukee owes a debt of gratitude to the untiring efforts and co-operative attitude of he Federated Trades Council in bringing about peace after these many months of controversy."

Under the terms of the settlement, the News' employment policy which reads that "this is not a contract, but a policy in operation on the paper which will be continued for at least a year and as long thereafter as economic conditions justify," has been dated September 1, 1936.

5-Day Week, $5 Per Day.

This policy provides that men with at least three years' experience receive not less than $5 per eight-hour day for five days a week. Beginners are paid not less than $25 per week.

A statement issued at guild headquarters said, "Included in the conditions upon which the guild agreed to end the strike was a verbal understanding reached between the trades council committee and Mr. Black. Under this agreement there will be no discrimination against any members of the guild. It further provides that the duration of the strike is not to be considered a lapse of employment for the purpose of determining vacations, dismissal bonuses, etc.

"Guild officers and all of the individual strikers expressed themselves as highly satisfied with the settlement."

Slayers of Three Reported Cornered

Ureka, Calif., Sept. 1 (AP).—An unconfirmed report late today said a posse was believed to have surrounded John T. Brite and Coke T. Brite, brothers sought for slaying three men, near Mount Sterling, 30 miles north.

The report was received by the sheriff's office from the forest ranger at the Dutchmans Peak station.

Fifteen possemen were reported nearing the spot, prepared for a gun battle should the fugitives decide to shoot it out.

Pastor Transferred.

Hedgesville, W. Va., Sept. 1.—The Rev. Walter J. Baker, who has been serving the Hedgesville circuit of the First M. E. Church for the last three and a half years, has been transferred to Herndon, Va., as a charge. He and Mrs. Baker planned to leave Hedgesville today for their new home.

hundreds of these hogsheads packed full of mild, ripe tobacco were rolled into our warehouses to age.

Everybody knows how ageing improves fine wine. Well, ageing improves tobaccos the same way —adds aroma and flavor.

Now three years later, these same mild ripe tobaccos are being made into Chesterfield Cigarettes.

Mild, ripe tobaccos make a milder better-tasting cigarette. When you smoke a Chesterfield you'll notice they have a different aroma . . . a more pleasing taste . . . they're better!

ing taxes under the AAA and special taxes under the Guffey coal act, and partly from the deferred method adopted for collecting taxes under the social security act, which will bring those latter revenues to the Treasury in the fiscal year 1938.

Holding these losses to amount to $668,000,000, the President said they were slightly more than offset by increases in revenue, estimated as follows:

From the revenue act of 1936, plus the estimated $82,000,000 in windfall taxes, $410,000,000; from the delayed collection of taxes on carriers and their employes, $33,000,000, and from improved business conditions, $237,000,009 in revenues.

Mr. Roosevelt revised his estimates of expenditures for the current fiscal year to the figure $7,762,835,300, which includes the $560,000,000 for completion of veterans' bonus payments and $580,000,000 for statutory debt retirement.

Under expenditures, the President listed AAA requirements at $585,000,000; Civilian Conservation Camps requirements at $300,000,000; Social Security Board, plus the Old Age Reserve Account, at $405,000,000; for interest on the public debt, $825,000,000; for recovery and relief, $1,885,000,000, and for other establishments of the Government, $448,986,000 more than their 1936 expenditures of $1,568,000,000.

The latter increase the President attributed to "the development of the regular annual public works program and to increased expenditures for national defense."

The CCC requirement of $300,000,000 is $80,000,000 more than his January estimate, but $228,000,000 less than was spent in 1936, due to the cut in enrollees.

The total expenditures for the 1937 fiscal year now run $117,533,962 more than the President's January estimate. Throughout his summation recurs the theme of the two New Deal fiscal calamities—passage of the soldiers' bonus act and the Supreme Court's AAA-killing decision.

Referring to continued increase in employment in private industry, the President said:

"* * * I believe there will be a further substantial increase of such employment during the coming months. Whether it will be sufficient to permit such a reduction in work relief rolls as will bring them within the amount appropriated by Congress is a matter that cannot be determined for several months."

In the closing paragraphs of his message, Mr. Roosevelt discussed the new Federal burden incident to caring for drought-stricken farm families throughout the sun-ruined Midwest. He said:

"In estimating, moreover, the amount that would be necessary to care for a reduced number of unemployed during the current fiscal year, no account could be taken of the serious drought which has affected large sections of our country. To relieve this serious situation in the drought areas will require the expenditure of substantial amounts from the emergency relief appropriation, although the total amount that will be needed for this purpose cannot be determined at this time."

He then added that he "confidently expected" requests for additional relief funds would not total more than $500,000,000.

The gross deficit projected by the President for July 1, 1937, of $2,096,996,300 is more than $2,500,000,000 less than the 1936 deficit of $4,764,000,000. The deficit in 1935 was $3,575,000,000 and in 1934 was $3,989,000,000.

Text of President's Statement on Budget for 1937

Continuing the practice inaugurated last year, the attached summation revises the budget for the fiscal year 1937 by reflecting the changes affecting the estimates of revenues and expenditures which have occurred since the 1937 budget was transmitted to Congress in January, 1936. Two outstanding events have taken place since that time which have materially affected the receipts and expenditures of the Government. The first of these was the decision of the Supreme Court declaring the agricultural adjustment act unconstitutional as a result of which the Government lost substantial revenue from processing taxes. The second was the passage by Congress of the adjusted compensation payment act providing for the immediate payment at their face value of the veterans' adjusted service certificates, which by their terms were not due until 1945.

As a result of the Supreme Court decision the estimated revenue from processing taxes for the fiscal year 1936 was reduced by $452,000,000. Up to the time of that decision the Agricultural Adjustment Administration had expended in accordance with law the sum of $325,000,000 and had made substantial commitments for additional expenditures in anticipation of revenue from this source. To provide for carrying out the moral obligation of the Government with respect to the commitments already entered into with farmers and which on their part had been at least partially performed, Congress appropriated $296,000,000.

By the enactment of the soil conservation and domestic allotment act, which included authority for an annual appropriation of not to exceed $500,000,000, Congress provided a new farm program to preserve to the farmers the benefits of fair and adequate prices for the product of their labors.

Bonus Tops Two Billions.

The passage of the adjusted compensation payment act caused an increase in payments to veterans for the past year of $1,674,000,000 and will result in further payments estimated at $560,000,000 on this account during the present fiscal year.

To meet the additional requirements of the Treasury on account of these expenditures the Congress was requested to provide sufficient additional revenue (1) to make good the loss of processing taxes in the fiscal year 1936; (2) to defray the annual cost of operation of the new farm program, and (3) to amortize over a period of nine years the cost of payment of the adjusted service certificates.

The revenue act of 1936, enacted by the Congress in response to this request, will produce, on the basis of estimated business conditions for the calendar year 1936, annual revenue in the amount of $652,000,000. For the fiscal year 1937 the amount of this revenue will be only $328,000,000, since only the first and second of the quarterly payments of income taxes under this act will be made to the Treasury within that year. For the same year, however, there will be a nonrecurring revenue of $82,000,000 from the socalled windfall taxes.

Review of the Fiscal Year.

The total receipts amounted to $4,115,956,615, against the estimate in the 1937 budget of $4,410,793,946, a net decrease of $294,837,331. After taking into consideration the loss in processing taxes of $452,000,000, receipts from other sources amounted to $157,000,000 more than was estimated. Total receipts showed a net increase of $316,000,000 over those for 1935, and receipts from sources other than processing taxes showed an increase over 1935 of $760,000,000.

The total expenditures of the Government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936, amounted to $8,879,796,258. The estimated expenditure shown in the budget of last January of $7,645,301,338 did not, of course, include $1,674,000,000 for adjusted compensation payments. Except for these payments the expenditures would have been about $439,000,000 less than the January estimate.

The deficit for the year amounted to $4,763,841,642, which included $403,240,150 for statutory debt retirement. Deducting this amount leaves a net deficit of $4,360,601,492. The estimated net deficit as shown in the budget of last January was $2,682,462,392. Had it not been for the invalidation of processing taxes and the passage of the adjusted compensation payment act, the net deficit would have been less than the January estimate by more than $400,000,000.

The public debt increased during the year $5,077,650,669, but in that time the balance of cash in the general fund of the Treasury likewise showed an increase of $40,164,684.

Forecast for 1937.

Total receipts in the fiscal year 1937 are now estimated at $5,665,839,000, a net increase of $12,000,000 over amount of the 1937 budget estimate. The estimated increases in general revenue more than offset the revenue losses, due in part to the invalidation of the special taxes levied under the provisions of the agricultural adjustment and bituminous coal conservation acts, and in part to the method finally adopted for collecting taxes under the social security act, which will defer to the fiscal year 1938 the collection of a portion of these taxes. The losses from these causes amount to $668,000,000, which are slightly more than offset by the following estimated increases in revenue: $410,000,000 (including $82,000,0000 from the windfall taxes), resulting from the revenue act of 1936; $33,000,000 from delayed collections of taxes on carriers and their employes, and $237,000,000 constituting an upward revision of revenue estimates due chiefly to improvement in business conditions.

The expenditure requirements for the fiscal year 1937 are now estimated at $7,762,835,300, which includes $560,000,000 to complete the payments of adjusted compensation to veterans and $580,000,000 for statutory debt retirement.

Some of the principal items included in the expenditure requirements are as follows: The Agricultural Adjustment Administration will require $585,000,000 and the Civilian Conservation Corps $300,000,000. The requirements of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will be greater for 1937 than for 1936 due to the interruption of that program in the past year by the Supreme Court decision and the consequent postponement of expenditures. The expenditures for the Civilian Conservation Corps for 1937 will be less than those for 1936 due to the reduction made in the number of enrollees as compared with the number for 1936.

Social Security Needs.

The operations of the Social Security Board and the establishment of the old age reserve account will require an additional $405,000,000. The board commenced operations late in the fiscal year 1936 and its expenditures, therefore, were not large during that year. The old age reserve account will require an initial contribution in 1937 of $285,000,000.

For interest on the public debt $825,000,000 will be required. In view of the general improvement in business conditions, it is estimated that there will be required a net amount of $1,835,000,000 for recovery and relief, an amount materially less than that for the fiscal year 1936.

The estimated expenditures for the other establishments are $448,986,000 greater than the expenditures for 1936, due principally to the development of the regular annual public works program and to increased expenditures for national defense.

The estimated deficit for 1937 is $2,096,996,300, which includes $580,000,000 for statutory debt retirement and $560,000,000 for further payments under the adjusted compensation payment act. Deducting the amount of the statutory debt retirement leaves a net deficit of $1,516,996,300. This does not mean that there will be an increase in the public debt of this amount for the reason that it is contemplated during the year to reduce the working balance of the general fund by approximately $1,100,000,000. The following statements show the contemplated changes during the year in the working balance of the general fund and in the gross public debt.

It will be noted that there is a substantial reduction in the deficit (excluding debt retirement and veterans' bonds) for each of the years following the peak of 1934.

In my message to Congress on March 18, 1936, requesting an appropriatiion of $1,500,000,000 for relief of unemployment, I stated that that request, together with those previously submitted to the Congress to provide for the Civilian Conservation Corps and certain public works would, if acted upon favorably by the Congress, give security during the next fiscal year to those most in need, on condition, however, that private employers hire many of those now on relief rolls. I further stated that should industry co-operatively achieve the goal of re-employment, the appropriation of $1,500,000,000, together with the unexpended balances of previous appropriations, would suffice to carry the Federal works program through the fiscal year 1937, and that only if industry failed to reduce substantially the number of those now out of work would another appropriation and further plans and policies be necessary. The unemployed are continuing to be absorbed in industry, and I believe that there will be a further substantial increase of such employment during the coming months. Whether it will be sufficient to permit such a reduction in work relief rolls as will bring them within the amount appropriated by Congress is a matter that cannot be determined for several months.

In estimating, moreover, the amount that would be necessary to care for a reduced number of unemployed during the current fiscal year, no account could be taken of the serious drought which has affected large sections of our country. To relieve this serious situation in the drought areas will require the expenditure of substantial amounts from the emergency relief appropriation, although the total amount that will be needed for this purpose cannot be determined at this time.

Another survey of the unemployment problem and the amount required for drought relief will be made early in the coming calendar year, and, if additional appropriations for these purposes are found necessary, the amounts expended therefrom will, of course, increase the estimated expenditures shown in this summation. It is confidently expected that any such requests for additional funds will amount to less than $500,000,000.

ARE YOU PAYING FOR HEAT YOU DON'T GET?

Simple Match Test Reveals Heating Secret That Saves Money

OWNERS PRAISE CRANE BOILER

INCREASED "CEILING SURFACE" CUTS HEATING BILLS... INCREASES HOME COMFORT

If your fuel bills are higher than they should be . . . if you find it hard to heat your house in cold weather . . . if you're paying for heat you don't get . . . by all means read this advertisement right through.

"Since I have had the Crane Boiler installed in my home I am very well pleased and satisfied with the results. Besides being a great saving, it is also very convenient—and it's comfortable throughout our entire house."
MRS. EDWARD VETTER,
Long Island City, N. Y.

Now make this simple test yourself. Hold the palm of your hand beside a lighted match. You'll feel some warmth. Now hold your hand over the flame. It's hot.

More heat is taken from the fuel and passed on into the radiators to heat your home.

Consolidating Social Gains.

Among the topics listed for discussion at the next conference of State Governors, scheduled for after the election, are the seemingly dissimilar problems of conflicts between State and Federal systems of taxation, and of the administration of the social security program. The latter subject raises many questions of procedure for which we have no guiding precedents in our own experience. It is also intimately related to the question of taxation, since the pay roll levies imposed to finance the social security program introduce another complicating factor into our tangled tax system.

These annual conferences of Governors afford a splendid opportunity for an exchange of views by State executives who are faced with the responsibility of finding practical solutions for concrete administrative difficulties. Tax experts and students of government might discuss tax conflicts endlessly without making much headway toward reform of recognized evils. Legislators, too, may talk convincingly and eloquently about the evils of overlapping systems of State and Federal taxation and yet do nothing to improve conditions.

But responsible administrators are confronted by complications which demand action as well as presentation and comprehension. In seeking guidance they confer among themselves and discover not merely what ought to be done under ideal circumstances but also what can be done here and at once.

This pragmatic approach to a solution of numerous questions that concern the States in relation to one another and to the Federal Government is of steadily increasing importance. And it represents the consolidation of social gains which are indicated rather than achieved by the passage of spectacular legislation.

Jobs, Not Pensions.

Veterans' organizations are properly concerned over unemployment among former soldiers. At the end of July a total of 282,910 veterans were registered as seeking work through the United States Employment Service. Not all of these men are jobless. Some are working under the WPA and others are merely trying to improve their status in private industry. But the number actually in need of jobs is sufficient to call for a very practical sort of help from the veterans' organizations.

The problem of finding work for these men is the more difficult because their average age is now 44 years—over the employment age fixed for new employes by some large corporations. As a result, younger men often slip into jobs that, except for the depression, would now be safely held by men of the World War generation. Organized veterans may well give their first attention to the task of minimizing these handicaps.

Already the Government is trying to solve the problem through its employment service. In each State a veterans' placement representative is giving his full time to the development of work opportunities for former soldiers. Moreover, veterans have been granted substantial preference rights in civil service appointments by the Federal Government as well as some States.

It is extremely unfortunate that this laudable work of finding employment for jobless veterans has now been associated with inexcusable pension suggestions. Millard W. Rice, legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has let it be known that unless present benefits are liberalized and more extensive preferences in employment are granted, that organization will demand general pensions for veterans at the next session of Congress.

By this very argument Mr. Rice admits the unsoundness of the proposal he is keeping in the background. If pensions are to be considered an alternative to employment, then it would be incumbent upon the Government to provide pensions for all jobless men. Not even Dr. Townsend has gone that far. But the idea is no more preposterous than the suggestion that the Government allow pensions to a special group because jobs are not available.

In contrast to this selfish attitude, the Disabled American Veterans have organized a special re-employment service to co-operate with public and private agencies throughout the country in the placement of former soldiers. With judicious appreciation of the distinction which should be made between disabled veterans and the men who laid aside their uniforms untouched by the perils of war, the D. A. V. favors ample pensions for the former and work opportunities for the latter. Veterans who really have the interests of their country at heart will support this distinction and resolutely oppose blandishments favoring further mass raids upon the Treasury.

Progress With A Conscience.

A problem which has confronted Western civilization ever since the industrial revolution is posed anew by the success with which the Rust cotton-picking machine has met field tests in Mississippi. Obviously there is much to be done before the invention can be regarded as perfected. Equally obviously it is already sufficiently practical to merit serious consideration of its economic implications. In the opinion of Mack Rust, it is already better as a cotton picker than the Ford Model T was as an automobile when first placed on the market.

In its tests on Monday the mechanical picker, which apparently could be sold for a few hundred dollars under mass production methods, did the work of 82 manual laborers. The fact that the cotton gathered by the machine contained sufficient foreign matter to reduce its quality seems insignificant beside the enormous labor-saving gain. This alone entitles the invention of the Rust brothers to be regarded in its possible effects as comparable with Eli Whitney's cotton gin.

Those effects divide sharply, with a demarcation as distinct as that which separates sunlight and shadow. On the shadow side is the terrible displacement of labor which is threatened for the army of unskilled and generally illiterate workers who still toil in the cotton fields as did their ancestors before them. On the sunny side is a foreshadowed saving in production costs which might well re-establish the threatened supremacy of American cotton and cut the cost of living perceptibly for every user of every type of cotton fabric.

Economists agree that, in the long run, the unemployment created by labor-saving devices is more than compensated by the new employment which they directly and indirectly create. Even if this were not so it is doubtful that the human spirit would tolerate a fettering of human ingenuity in the interests of those who suffer from the shadow-side of progress. Moreover, a very real social advantage of mechanical development is the elimination of degrading labor which it permits. As the brutalization of the stokehold is being ended by oil fuel so "the greatest single source of child labor in America" may well be threatened by this invention of the Rust brothers.

But long-range advantages do not constitute all the picture. Those who are displaced by the machine are not those who benefit from the machine. The hardships and the dislocation of individual lives caused by technological unemployment are not open to question or minimization. To a very large extent the cost of progress is written in terms of unjustifiable human suffering. The wise society is that which does nothing to stay the trend of general advancement, but insists that it shall be guided in channels where its forward movement shall be least destructive.

It is a sign of the times that in the case at issue the inventors are as interested in the social implications of their machine as in its economic possibilites. The Rust brothers know the misery of insecurity from personal experience, and as Southerners they are fully aware of how deeply their invention may affect hundreds of thousands of lives. Deeply convinced that mechanical cotton-picking may in the long run remove a form of peonage, they are equally concerned lest the transition should be too sweeping or too abrupt. Their social outlook is as remarkable and as progressive as their machine. And in that conjunction lies the great promise of their invention.

Harvard's Tercentenary.

Twenty-five hundred American and foreign scholars, meeting in halls along the Charles River, make Boston today beyond a doubt the hub of the universe—intellectually. The good people of the Massachusetts Bay Colony who, 300 years ago, voted nearly half of their community's annual tax income to establish "a schoale or colledge," could scarcely in their fondest Puritan dreams have visualized their Harvard flowering thus magnificently.

To assist in its tercentenary celebration, Harvard has attracted the cream of the world's intellectuals, each savant by his presence acknowledging the university's eminence. Nor have they been content to leave the compliment at that. Rather, they are combining their scholarship in an attempt to appraise man's place in the cosmos (or chaos) which of itself may add to the luster of Harvard's name.

If further justification of the interest aroused by this anniversary is asked, there are the words of Alfred North Whitehead, himself a member of the university but well qualified by his English background and his fame as a philosopher to consider it objectively. Writing in the current Atlantic Monthly, he refers to Harvard as "the greatest of existing cultural institutions."

Further, he describes "the fate of the intellectual civilization of the world today" as hanging in the hands of "Harvard," which he uses partly as a designation of the particular university and partly in symbolic reference to the system of unfettered higher education which it so admirably represents. As the University of Paris had the opportunity to fashion the intellect of the Middle Ages, so Dr. Whitehead sees the really great universities of America facing their challenge today.

And, with heartening disregard for the mists now closing in from almost every quarter on a darkling world, he concludes that "the universe is without bounds, learning is world wide . . . you can not limit the sources of a great civilization nor can you assign the stretch of its influence."

We cannot adequately measure the influence of Harvard and those comparable schools where the constant effort is to set men free. But we at least know that intellectual shipwreck for the American people will be improbable while these lighthouses continue to send their beacons forth.

The Spanish Popular Front.

Faced by the probability of their extermination in the event of a rebel victory, a heterogeneous group of Leftist elements in Spain has rallied to the defense of the beleaguered government.

For more than seven weeks the united front has remained unbroken. But the strain of civil war is beginning to tell. Nerves are getting ragged. It is stated that cracks are appearing in the Popular Front; that these, in the event of a government victory, are certain to lead to an open split. The radicals are becoming increasingly hostile to President Manuel Azana. He is being charged with having failed to take seriously the advance warnings of the rebellion and with having done nothing to prevent it.

This report can very easily be believed. For the fact of the matter is that, despite the charge that the Madrid government is wholly Communist in its make-up, aims and policies, it is actually being supported by a coalition in which the Communists are only one, and by no means the most important, element.

That coalition contains many liberals such as President Azana himself; moderate Socialists such as Indalecio Prieto, the real directing head of the struggle against the rebels; radical Socialists such as Largo Caballero; Communists, Anarcho-Syndicalists and others. United in opposition to the rebels, these elements within the Popular Front coalition by no means see eye to eye on other matters.

The strength of the various elements within the government can in some measure be gaged by the results of last February's election. Of the 236 seats captured by the Popular Front, 168 went to Left Republicans; 99 to Socialists, moderate and radical; 16 to Communisits, and 3 to Anarcho-Syndicalists. Outside this coalition were minor varieties of Trotskyists, Anarchists and Syndicalists all of whom, however, are now helping in the struggle against the military junta.

Should the government win, all these groups will no doubt claim a share in the fruits of that victory. Even Indalecio Prieto, who has in the past opposed a program of extreme radicalism, now admits that the defeat of the rebels would lead to a strong leftward shift in the government's policies. That it would mean the establishment in Spain of a regime similar to that created in Russia following the Bolshevik victory in 1917 is none the less scarcely probable.

The individualist tradition is strong in Spain. That country is the only one where Anarchism and Syndicalism are still active political forces. There was no such tradition in Russia. Certainly the Anarcho-Syndicalists, hating the state as the root of all evil, will oppose with all their might any attempt at centralized control over the nation's entire economic and political life.

Indeed the Spanish Communists themselves are declaring that they have no intention of trying to force the bolshevization of Spain. For the moment they are content to support the Popular Front against the Fascists, thus carrying out a policy approved by the last world congress of the Third Internationale.

Pickup In Basic Industry.

In spite of pronounced increase in the volume of new security issues, which has brought flotations for the first seven months of the current year to $3,977,000,000, as compared with only $679,000,000 in 1933, offerings are still being made chiefly for purposes of refunding.

The total amount of corporate issues for provision of new capital is estimated at $532,000,000 for the period from January to August 1. To swell this volume comes the announcement that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation is about to float a $55,000,000 bond issue, devoting about $40,000,000 of the proceeds to plant improvement and expansion.

For a long time basic industries lagged behind the non-durable consumption goods industries in the recovery upturn. Today, however, the steel industry is operating at a high rate of activity, having risen to a six-year peak at a time when seasonal declines are usual. Furthermore, demands for steel products are well distributed, with orders coming from various types of consuming industries instead of being concentrated upon a few lines. The pronounced improvement in demands for heavy steel is especially encouraging, since that branch of the industry suffered exceptionally heavy losses in the early stages of depression.

With the heavy industries participating to an increasing extent in the general business upturn, opportunities for profitable employment of capital in industry will correspondingly increase. Recovery in the market for new capital issues will be retarded, however, so long as the Federal Government continues to borrow huge sums to finance recurrent deficits. Its presence in the investment market not only drains funds away from private enterprise, but creates an anxiety about the financial future of the country which makes business men reluctant to venture upon expansion programs.

The "Reds" In Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mrs. Moore is confused in her letter to The Post on the Spanish situation. She must have been reading that part of the press which gives only the rebel side.

What are the facts? President Azana, of Spain, is a mild, Left Republican, similar to our progressives. Who won the last election in Spain?

Leading were the Left Republicans, next were the Socialists, the Fascists third; Communists, fourth, etc. No one party having a majority in Parliament, a coalition of parties which promised to support the democratic-republican government against any dictatorship was formed. These parties were: Left Republican, Left Independent, Socialist and Communist parties. Azana was elected President by Parliament, being backed by the solid vote of these parties, and a couple of smaller groups.

The Fascisti and Monarchist parties, bent on monarchial-dictatorship or Fascist-dictatorship, were furious because they had expected to form the government at the result of the election, but found themselves in the minority, so they plotted and are now putting over a revolution, with the announced intention of destroying the democratically constituted government, and establishing a dictatorship like Italy or Germany, with only one political party, dissolving by force and violence the present liberal coalition. So if they win, we will see that only one political party will be tolerated hereafter in Spain, that of the Fascist-Monarchist group which is a decided minority of the total population.

The Fascists and Monarchists are the real "reds" because they are the revolutionists. No question about it. So long as Communists keep their pledge in Spain or elsewhere to co-operate with democratic institutions, we have no moral right to question their integrity.

"Actions speak louder than words." Thus far the Communists have kept their word in Spain, except in Catalonia which is practically an independent government in which the majority appears to favor Communism. If that is what the majority want, they should have it, right or wrong. Let the people rule! But we should not mistake Catalonia for the Spanish central government at Madrid. They are not the same.

Samples and Figures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reply to criticism of the American Institute of Public Opinion poll on July 26 you stated in part, "Our correspondent shows himself completely ignorant of the tested scientific accuracy of the device of 'sampling' as used by vital statisticians, mining engineers and Government grain inspectors, to mention only a few instances. The A. I. P. O. polls each week examine an entirely adequate number of voters, carefully selected by categories of age, sex, occupation, political affiliation and economic status so as to represent a fair cross-section of the national electorate."

The adequacy of this "fair cross-section of the national electorate" can be perceived by computing the number of categories resulting from this classification. Suppose there are a minimum of three age classes, two sexes, four occupational groups, six political parties, four kinds of "economic status" in each of four different-sized communities in each State. A little multiplication results in 110,592 "pigeonholes" into which the electorate are placed. Each week the A. I. P. O. mails about 100,000 ballots, an unpublished number of which are returned. These are supplemented by an unpublished number of interviews.

I am sure that your failure to heretofore publish the figures secured by the A. I. P. O. is merely an oversight. It is needless to remind you, of course, that scientists usually substantiate their assertions by the presentation of the basic data on which their assertions are founded. Doubtless you have been merely awaiting a propitious opportunity for the publication of the figures collected by the A. I. P. O. poll.

To forestall additional criticism from the more ignorant of your correspondents I suggest that you publish the following data in support of your assertions concerning the A. I. P. O. poll:

1. The number of eligible voters classified by "age, sex, occupation, political affiliation and economic status," in the various sized communities of each of the 48 States.

2. The number of returned ballots from any poll you choose, preferably one concerning the Presidential candidates, classified in the same manner. These data are to be absolute numbers and not percentages.

3. The criteria for an "adequate number of voters" and the methods used to determine whether or not the sample truly represents the universe.

If this is done, carping critics will retreat in confusion and the tested scientific device of sampling will reign supreme. I eagerly await the rout of the ignorant.

District Co-Op Movement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the benefit of those not aware of it, may I point out that an increasingly important educational project is being developed in the District of Columbia by the Washington Consumers' Club. Leroy A. Halbert is director of the Co-operative Educational Center at 1410 Columbia road northwest, which maintains office hours five days each week from 9 a. m. to 12 midnight.

Washington needs such a clearing house for information and literature regarding the co-operative movement in the District. Recent articles in The Post presented a constructive outline of the experience and success of European co-ops, particularly those of Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries. These articles give us a better conception of the true function of co-operatives in our own land.

Skeptics could do no better than to investigate and test the workability of co-ops founded on Rochdale principles. Would it not be a wise course for our generation of youth to dedicate itself to a solution of our major economic evils, and in the future avoid the economic disasters with which such vast numbers of our people have been afflicted?

Enough business has been carried on by co-ops here and abroad to encourage their growth and usefulness. Already some success has been attained here in group-purchasing activities and a number of new buying units are expected to co-ordinate their interests in the District's co-op movement this fall.

Mr. Blanton's Defeat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are many reasons being presented why Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, was defeated for Congress. But if you would like to know what cost Mr. Blanton at least 10,000 votes alone in his district, it wasn't only because he fought the Townsend pension plan so hard, but the way he treated Dr. Townsend when he was before that mock trial committee, being vilified and misaccused by that modern Congressional Sanhedrin of America under the domination of Pontius Pilate Bell.

Mr. Blanton, like most public men, made mistakes, but this was political error No. 1. My prediction is that two years hence will see the defeat of many of the old-timers in Congress that have been there many years.

Response Mournful.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your paper of even (get even) date, is a communication from Radford Warren, of Landon, Md., excoriating me like nobody's business. He lays particular stress on my broadcasting. This worries me a lot because any man who both reads The Post regularly, and also listens to me regularly, is a smart chap, and his opinion might easily be correct! STRICKLAND GILLILAN.

Nationalization Of Arms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with considerable amazement that I read in The Post of August 30 Frank Hanighen's "French Nationalization of Arms Industry."

That the acts of the "Red" government of France should be reported as news is quite right, though even in this the evident radical bias of the writer seems foreign to an American newspaper. But it is the inference that America should follow the example of France (and of Soviet Russia) that I feel it a duty to protest.

Cannot any intelligent man see that the great underlying and fundamental purpose of the "nationalization of munitions" by the government of any country is the disarming of the people, thus enabling a small minority of radicals, when once they have seized key positions of the central government, to ignore the futile protests of a disarmed and helpless citizenry?

And the excuse for all this is "many rumors and some evidence" (how much evidence is "some evidence?"). I attended as a spectator, with no personal stake in the results, two sessions of Senator Nye's committee, and it soon became painfully apparent that they seemed bent on proving certain predetermined conclusions, rather than collecting evidence on both sides of the question at issue. And it is seldom, if ever, mentioned that the majority report of that committee was signed by four members, and the minority report by three; thus giving a bare majority of but one in seven.

Dissatisfied Chamber.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of August 30 contained the following striking headlines: "Business Rises to 7-Year-High; Future Bright. Industry and Agriculture Gain; Chamber (U. S. Chamber of Commerce) Scores New Deal Tactics." If we are getting out of this wholesale depression it is a strange time to complain of the tactics.

The article continued with "A flood of optimistic figures rivaling prosperity days in their rosy outlook." Yet the Chamber is dissatisfied. Why? Isn't it results that we are after? But many will be in the class with the 9 out of 10 lepers who forgot to return thanks.

Andrew Johnson, in one of his deepest moments, said: "Gratitude is the highest attribute of man." The rich of this country, as well as the poor, may well thank Roosevelt for keeping us out of a holocaust such as is upon Spain.

The Lightning Picture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I recently received a copy of the rotogravure section of The Post of August 2. It contained a reproduction of a photograph of Washington Monument at the time it was struck by lightning. Your photographer surely ought to know that this photograph simply represents the monument in dark silhouette against a flash of lightning that is probably several miles behind it. The flash apparently passes back of the extreme top point of the monument, and again appears about half way down on the right side on its way to the ground. If the lightning had really struck the monument, as claimed by the photographer, then the top beveled slopes would have reflected the light, instead of being in dark silhouette.

The Peace Conference.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of August 28 calling attention to the "curious sidelight" on a "reported plan" of the President for a peace conference of nations, only proves to intelligent readers that the method of sarcasm and ridicule, aimed at a superior man, simply arouses pity for a mind, indefinitely more "amateurish" and childish which could conceive of anything so far from facts.

The Post Impressionist

"The Best Companions."

Post Office, Wednesday.

CHESTERFIELD said it: "The best companions are the best books." But, in ways that cynic never guessed, books may be more than merely companions. Consider any of the too few branches of the District Public Library—or, better, the main building at K and Eighth streets northwest.

Oh, yes—books as books, of course!

"Nobody reads fiction any more." A New York publisher said so the other day; publishers acquire exaggeration from reading their blurbs. "The movies have killed the novel," he elucidated. "When people can see a story for less than a dollar, they don't want to pay two or three dollars and the trouble of reading it."

And yet:

"Our largest fiction-demands," one of the library's officials told your columnist, "is for books on which motion-pictures are based. As soon as we see advertisements that announce the coming of a motion picture based on a novel, we begin to assemble our copies of the novel, for we have learned from experience that hundreds of people who are going to see the picture will come here and ask for the book, either just before or just after having seen the screen version. Indeed, most of such book-borrowers among our 126,000 ask for additional books on the time or place of the story.

"When the picture is historical," the official continued, "we have a strong run on histories or biographies of its epoch or leading character. The author of the scenario of 'The Gorgeous Hussy' came to us for data about old Washington, while at work on his script." (The Post-Impressionist can't help wondering what the author did with his data when he got it!) "But when 'Mary, of Scotland' was shown, there was a call for such volumes as the notebook of Nau (Queen Mary's secretary), Dalzell's 'Fragments' and the Strickland edition of the Queen's letters—not to mention Wright's 'Elizabeth and Her Times.'"

And our official said:

"Even a Zane Grey picture will stimulate the library's book-borrowers to read Duffus' 'Santa Fe Trail.' When the latest 'Anna Karenina' picture was shown here, a woman came in and asked for the book. She was an overworked housewife—had long considered herself too tired to read much. Now she knows all Tolstoi—at least the novels and plays—almost by heart."

But:

The District Library has helped people to plan their houses—and then to drape and furnish them. Your columnist knows of one house in Washington which the owners and their friends call "The House that the Library Built."

And:

The Library has been responsible for the formation of 16 amateur orchestras in Washington. To the person who has to listen to some of them, this may not seem an unmixed blessing. You can't doubt, however, that it is joy for the members of those orchestras.

They are made possible by the Library's music department and by the opportunity it offers for the borrowing of scores. Buying scores outright is an expensive process.

Five lads came in—lads in their early teens. "We're forming an orchestra," they proudly announced. What instruments did they possess? Two trombones and three saxophones—and the department head would be permitted to bet that the boys could play them, too!

It was tactfully represented to the budding Lombardos that some music of other sorts—string-music, for instance—would be almost necessary.

"Aw, then it's all off," the leader growled. "None of us is fiddlers."

Yet the department-chief soon proved that there existed other boys who fiddled, and who wanted to meet boys who tromboned and saxophoned.

Just as bookshelves and reading-desks have captured what was once the Library's auditorium, so the presence of the Library's musical instruments in the staff-lunchroom is severely curtailing meal-hours.

When he stood on the tips of his bare toes, the youngster could lean confidentially over that desk marked "INFORMATION" in the lobby.

"Kin I get a book?" he inquired.

"What book?" countered the man behind the information-desk.

"That's what I wanna find out," the youngster answered. "'Tain't for me. It's for mom. Pop's dead, an' mom hasn't any job. An' we haven't any money. So she said for me to come here and get a book all about ways you kin make money at home. I reckon any book'll do, s'long as it just tells that."

Mom got what she wanted, too. The Library's expert on home-industries found it.

He's had a lot of such requests since the early days of the depression.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

That Cow Skull.

Any cartoonist can justify under artistic license the use of the property skull of a cow in the campaign photographs of the Dust Bowl which were posed and snapped by the Resettlement Administration to dramatize the New American Desert. Without the skull the pictures would have been meaningless, for we have learned to demand it, in American scenes, just as we demand a cluster of distant palms of a pyramid in a picture of the African desert and a cracked water pitcher in a hall bedroom.

The desert behind the skull was neither more no less real, for the presence of the prop and the photographer showed some restraint at that, for the accepted formula calls for not less than three bleached ribs along with the skull. It wasn't the photographer's fault that we demand hokum in our pictures as well as in our oratory, and it probably was no fun to go clattering around the country lugging a cow skull along with his suitcase and all the gadgets and traps which a photographer has to carry in his line of work.

• • • •

If you think it was, suppose you try packing a cow skull, with two horns, into a suitcase or wraping it up in a convenient bundle. Moreover, the suitcase and trunk manufacturers do not produce a cow skull case. They make form-fitting leather boxes for silk hats and harps and many highly specialized cases for the convenience of magicians, but the problem of the cow skull was unique.

It would have been a little convenient if this photographer had been able to unscrew the antlers or fold them over, and you may be sure he was much relieved when he turned it back to the property room in Washington and got his receipt.

In literature they call such things cliches—not skulls, but habits of expression. But, in the monkey house, as the cartoonists' room is sometimes called, they are known as gags.

No picture of the home of a poor family is complete without a little patch where the plaster has fallen off the wall revealing the lath beneath. The cartoon Communist has bushy whiskers, although I have yet to meet a Communist with a beard, and Earl Browder, the Communist nominee for President this year, wears his face nude except a sorrel mustache. The cartoon plutocrat wears a silk hat and a golden log chain strung across a bulging vest adorned with dollar marks, although old Andy Mellen, the boss plutocrat of this country, wears an old fedora which looks as though the cat had been sleeping on it and is so skinny that you can't see his vest at all.

Maybe he wears a wrist watch, too, although, come to think of it, a man of Mr. Mellen's conservative disposition would be more likely to save the price of a watch and just ask other people what time it is when he wants to know. I have met some other plutocrats who are flat-bellied and hard, spending a little time in the gym every day or twice a week and fit to punch the ears off many individuals who have imagined the plutocrat as a fat and puffy ruin made soft by caviar and turkey. More than likely, plutocrats hate caviar and turkey, but go for beef stew.

There is also the workingman in his traditional square paper cap. Did you ever see a workingman in a square paper cap, except printers, who used to roll their own to keep their hair out of their eyes or the grease out of their hair, but now, for the most part, wear those boughten duck-bill caps with the beak ripped off?

I don't think the Republicans can make much of the use of that property cow skull. There are certain liberties in the picture art.

• • • •

If it is a shot of some dashing young scion of society out for an evening in a night club with a scioness they move a champagne cooler up alongside the table for atmosphere, though the pair of them may be drinking Tom Collinses or old fashioneds. And once when Mr. Coolidge went up to Plymouth, Vt., to see his father, the Republicans put him into a suit of overalls fresh from the store, shoved a hayfork into his hand and appealed to the farm vote with a picture of a hay-shaker shaking hay in a stand-up collar and tie.

For the lack of a little hokum in a picture Jack Dempsey was like to go to prison once. During the war he posed for a picture running a riveter in a shipyard. If he had thought to put on a pair of workman's shoes it would have been all right, but he was wearing patent leather shoes with suede tops, and that error eventually cost him more than $100,000 in lawyers fees and all.

Coronation Risks Insured by Lloyds

London, Sept. 1 (AP).—Fifteen guineas per 100 insurance is being paid by trading interests who would suffer losses if the coronation is postponed. (A guinea is about $5.)

Lloyds underwriters are accepting these risks only after making close inquiries that the assured stands to suffer loss in the event of postponement. This is necessary in view of the "budget leak" and the committeee's request for inquiry to prevent speculation.

The rate to cover postponement by one day is 15 guineas per 100; 12 guineas for postponement of not less than one month and 10 guineas for postponement beyond the end of 1937.

The majority of inquiries come from bunting manufacturers, potteries, hotels caterers and firms who are spending money in anticipation of coronation orders.

French 'New Deal'

Blum Government Begins 'Experiment' In Socialism With Many Citizens Fearing Psychological Reaction Of Nation.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

ENTERING a new and most important phase of its existence, the French Popular Front's far-reaching program of social and political reform will now be put to the acid test of practice. Parliament, having done its part by voting at a record pace all the laws it was presented with for the past two-and-one-half months, has just called a halt for its annual summer spell and left the Blum government with the task of putting its new legislation into practice.

With the authority bestowed upon him by the general French elections of last May, the Socialist premier whipped the Chamber and Senate into such swift action that he succeeded in getting more than 60 new laws passed upon favorably. With this record voting back of it, the new government must now come down to earth and put its fancies into fact by means of government decrees.

Often referred to as the French "New Deal," it is pertinent to analyze this program.

Chief Innovations Lie In Eight New Laws.

OUT OF the 60 or more laws mentioned above, at least eight are worthy of a brief survey, not only because they constitute roughly the economic backbone of the French experiment, but also because their general character deals with all-important economic principles, and as such they may be of interest to the American reader. These new principles are the following:

1. The 40-hour work week.
2. Paid holidays for workers.
3. Collective bargaining and closed shop system.
4. Compulsory school attendance up to the age of 14.
5. Nationalization of armament industries.
6. A farm board for wheat.
7. A new statute for the Bank of France.
8. A general plan for public works.

Although voted upon favorably, the 40-hour work week is not yet applied everywhere in France, but it will be eventually, as soon as successive government decrees make it compulsory in every branch of activity. For instance, as an approach to the 40-hour work week, it has just been decreed that all food stores in Paris shall close on Mondays, following their regular Sunday closing, thus allowing their employes to rest two days a week instead of one.

According to the new law for paid holidays, every worker in France is now entitled to a fully paid one-week paid vacation after he has served six months in the same firm and to a yearly two-week paid holiday thereafter.

As regards collective bargaining, the law has it that, upon the request of a trade or employers' union in one line of business, and under the minister of labor's supervision, a collective contract may be drawn out and made compulsory for all employers and employes in such line of business, either for one region of France alone or throughout the whole country. Among other things such collective contracts will fix minimum wages for each category of workers, organize the election of labor representatives in every firm employing more than ten persons and insure complete freedom as to unionism.

The fact that children must now attend school until the age of 14, instead of 13 as heretofore in France, is an indirect way of prohibiting child labor until the age of 14.

Arms Nationalization Most Revolutionary.

THE LAW calling for the nationalization of armament industries is probably the most revolutionary piece of legislation in the whole experiment. All those nations which investigated the profits of munitions makers can now watch the French attempt and see if it works, as the French law was voted on the ground that (a) it was moral, as it would cut war profiteering; (b) it was economical, as the government would make its own armaments instead of buying them from private firms; (c) it would make industrial mobilization in time of war easier; (d) it would pave the way for eventual international control and future armament reductions.

The French law decrees that all firms making armaments only will be turned over to the government and receive a cash indemnity; that all firms making both armaments and commercial products will be under strict government control (51 per cent of the capital stock) or supervision, unless it is possible to segregate entirely the commercial from the armament activity, in which case the commercial activity of a firm will be left undisturbed.

It may be interesting to note that, for the purposes of this law, the word "armaments" means: (a) firearms of all sorts, (b) warships, war planes, armored cars, (c) gas masks.

National Wheat Bureau Will Supervise Crops.

THE LAW setting up a national wheat bureau provides that government-supervised co-operatives will be practically the sole buyers and sellers of wheat in France; that the amount of wheat each producer can sell above 367 bushels (100 quintals) will be determined according to planned economy; that a government-controlled board will fix the price of wheat for each French crop, during the latter part of August. It is expected that this year's price will be around $2.50 a bushel.

As for the new statute of the Bank of France, it was devised chiefly to modify the composition of its board of directors, which heretofore was composed largely of bankers and businessmen elected by the bank's stockholders. From now on it will include representatives of all branches of French economy and French public institutions, together with members appointed by the government. It is thus expected the Bank of France will be more willing to help the French treasury when it needs money.

Then last, but not least, comes a general plan calling for some 20,000,000,000 francs of public works (roughtly $1,300,000,000), to be carried out in three years.

Such as the main lines of what has been termed the French "New Deal." They are all meant to put an end to the orthodox deflationary policy which has been pursued through the past years, but not always strictly. The main idea is to prime the pump of recovery by government spending, raising salaries, expanding credit and increasing the purchasing power of the masses.

Whether the French economic structure can stand it as well as did that of other countries, with much vaster government borrowing facilities, is hard to tell. However, it seems beyond question that the experiment does not look so bold or revolutionary now as it did some two and a half months ago when France was in the middle of a disquieting strike situation.

Public Opinion Seen Largely Supporting Plans.

INDEED, there is a vast body of public opinion in this country which thinks that most of these reforms were justified, that something had to be done anyway, that France will not go to the dogs just because she has parted with orthodoxy. In fact, a large number of people appear to accept the government's social and economic legislation with less and less resentment. But many, even among those who are perfectly willing to give the "experiment" a fair chance, are worried by certain of its political and psychological implications. In other words, what is a source of concern to them is not so much what the French government is offering, but the way it offers it.

Swept into power by a large popular majority, the Popular Front may have found it difficult at times to adhere to a strictly nonpartisan attitude. The fact is that, to make a success of its new radical policy, it resorted to the usual drumming of accusations against the so-called 200 families, the vested interests, the tories and the 44 per cent of the French electorate who voted anti-popular, putting all in the same bag, labeled "Fascist."

Either in Parliament or during innumerable speeches delivered regularly every Sunday at political meets, cabinet members have repeatedly spoken the language of distrust toward nearly one-half the people of this country, making it plain that if the experiment failed to bring "bread, peace and freedom" to all it would be their fault.

The result is that political divisions are as strong as ever, with raised fists and a certain amount of hatred floating in the air. How that hatred will materialize if the French "New Deal" does fail is the big question mark of the present French situation.

Vote in Maine To Give Boost InLandonDrive

G.O.P. Now Has Wide Edge in Straw Poll in the Pine Tree State.

By George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 1.—If the present sentiment of Maine voters regarding the national ticket is expressed in the State elections September 14, a Republican victory of approximately two to one may be expected on that date.

The latest poll of the Institute of Public Opinion, which will be reported in full in next Sunday's Washington Post, shows Landon polling 67 per cent of the major party vote in Maine today, against 33 per cent for President Roosevelt.

A two-to-one victory in Maine's local elections will give the Republican Party increased confidence at a time when they most need it. It may lead students of politics to conclude that because of the huge G. O. P. majority in Maine, the Nation will go Republican next November.

A two-to-one Republican majority September 14 would be roughly comparable to the 1928 election, when Maine elected a Republican Governor by the overwhelming majority of 70 per cent. Two months later Herbert Hoover defeated Alfred E. Smith by a landslide.

Roosevelt Slips.

A check-up on the validity of the maxim "As Maine goes, so goes the Nation," indicates that when the Republicans win the September election in Maine by only a small majority, there is no assurance that the Nation will elect a Republican President, but that when the G. O. P. wins the Main election by a large majority, the Nation goes Republican in November.

The poll also shows that the political effect of President Roosevelt's recent trip to Maine, where he inspected the Passamaquoddy tidal project, has begun to wear off. His present strength of 33 per cent is one point below the 34 per cent he received in the Institute's August 23 poll, which in turn had shown a five-point rise since August 9—undoubtedly as a result of his visit.

The defection from President Roosevelt in New England since 1932 has been second largest for any section of the country. In the 1932 election he received 51 per cent of New England's major party vote, and today he polls but 40.5 per cent—a loss of 10.5 points.

Lemke Power Fades.

The only larger defection has occurred in the West Central section—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota—where he polls 50.5 per cent today against 63 per cent in 1932—a difference of 12.5 points.

Since the Institute's last poll, reported August 23, William Lemke's strength has declined in Maine. The candidate of the Union Party polls 4.8 per cent today, against 5.9 per cent in the previous voting. Landon gained all that Lemke lost, and took a little from Roosevelt and from other third parties as well. A comparison of the vote for all parties in the last two Maine polls follows.

Vote of All Parties.

	Today	Aug. 23 Poll	Pts. Change
Landon	63.0%	61.0%	+2.0
Roosevelt	31.1	31.4	— .3
Lemke	4.8	5.9	—1.1
Thomas	1.0	1.1	— .1
All Others	.1	.6	— .5

Woman Kills Husband, 2 Children and Self

Carbon Hill, Ala., Sept. 1 (AP).—A man and his wife and their two children were found shot to death today in their home at Howard mines, 4 miles south of here.

Neighbors discovered the tragedy when they broke in a door after seeing smoke come from the house. All the bodies lay on one bed, which was in flames. Each had been shot in the forehead.

The dead were Marcus Studdard, 32; his wife Mary, 30; Kathleen Studdard, 6, and Shirley Studdard, 5 months.

Sheriff H. G. Mitchell of Fayette County, said his investigation indicated Mrs. Studdard killed her husband and children and then ended her own life.

Poison Found in Body, Deaths Investigated

Bedford, Ind., Sept. 1 (AP).—Coroner R. E. Wynne investigated today the recent deaths of Mrs. Katie Fultz, 50, and Mrs. Ruth Frances Dillon, 25, after State chemists reported finding evidence of poison in the contents of Mrs. Fultz's stomach.

Dr. Wynne said he would seek to determine whether a wholesale poisoning had been attempted of persons living at the Fultz home 8 miles west of this city. Samuel Kern, brother of Mrs. Dillon, and John Tuddy, a nephew, have been seriously ill but are recovering.

China Defense Board Defers Civil Control

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, Sept. 1.—Creation of the national defense conference gives general Chiang Kai-Shek two more titles and the government another high military organ.

As chief of the national military affairs commission, Chiang becomes chairman of the new conference which is to meet here at least once a year to consider all subjects under the head of national defense. As prime minister or chairman of the executive council, the general automatically becomes vice chairman of the defense conference.

The new organization grew out of a political gesture by Chiang to meet popular demand that something be done to save China from further loss of territory. However, its powers are wide enough to make it an organ of vital importance should Nanking authorities decide to fall back on it in an emergency.

Holds Wide Powers.

Besides national defense, the new conference is charged with considering the republic's foreign policy, co-ordination between civil and military branches of government, mobilization and wartime organization.

For years, Chinese politicians have been working to subordinate military to civil authority. The organization of the defense council indefinitely defers materialization of this aim, however. Its articles of organization provide that its decisions shall be referred to the national government, not for consideration, but for execution.

Of China's previously established military organs, the military affairs commission is most important. Before Chiang returned to Nanking as responsible head of the political administration, this commission functioned as a sort of super-government. It issued orders and decrees on internal taxation, land reform, education, opium suppression and finance. Even though Chiang now executes affairs of state through normal administrative channels, the commission continues as the ranking military organization.

War Ministry Secondary.

The ministry of war whose duties and powers are chiefly routine, is under the national executive council. The board of general staff would assume greater importance in wartime, but normally its activities are confined to office work.

Of equal rank is the directorate-general of military training. It not only has the responsibility of educating officers and training the standing army, but also is entrusted with the task of whipping civilians into shape for service in war-time.

The military advisory council is said to be a consulating body of the nation's "best brains." Actually it does little more than provide "gold braid" with harmless official occupation.

First Slums Unit Opens at Atlanta

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 1 (U.P.).—A New Deal spokesman promised sanitary homes for 100,000 Americans within the next year tonight as Techwood, first completed unit in the Administration's $131,000,000 slum-clearance program, was dedicated formally.

Col. Horatio B. Hackett, assistant to PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes, stood among trim, ultra-modern rows of apartments today for the dedication and contrasted the new housing system here with the dismal, disease-ridden slums it had replaced.

Sprinkled in the crowd that jammed the project for dedication ceremonies were most of the low-salaried families who have found new homes in the newly completed $3,000,000 development. Streets that once were littered with dirt and debris were trim and neat. Children of project residents were playing in spacious grass plots or wading in splash pools provided for recreation.

English Socialite Set For Hop to New York

Abingdon, Berkshire, England, Sept. 1 (AP).—Her plane groomed for a solo Atlantic flight to New York, Mrs. Beryl Markham, 33-year-old English society matron, awaited a favorable weather report today for a take-off from the Royal Air Force airdrome here.

Mrs. Markham, mother of a 7-year-old boy, hopes to be the first woman to accomplish the westward crossing alone—a feat few men have dared.

'La Madre Patria'

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico City.

A MEXICO which has known bloodshed and strife for countless generations looks across the Atlantic these days and contemplates, with varying emotions, the situation of "La Madre Patria." No longer do Mexicans receive their laws from Old Spain, but neither have they forgotten that their chief heritage is from the land that is now suffering untold losses in men, money and a cultural background that reaches beyond the days when Carthage challenged Rome.

Historians who are interested in the parallels which their studies sometimes bring home to them should check Spanish events of just 116 years ago. At that time Riego's revolt had forced on Ferdinand VII the radical constitution of 1812. Mexico, still ruled by a viceroy, her few insurgent leaders in hiding, was once again ready to accept Spanish sovereignty within reason. But the Spanish radicals of 1820, like those of 1936, determined to change Spain and her colonies overnight. The result was Iturbide's uprising, the expulsion of the Spanish troops and the eventual founding of the Mexican republic.

Today the Mexican government watches Spain closely. Dedicated to upholding "the rights of the workers," the group in power has more than once flirted with communism and has written into the constitution amendments that are frankly socialistic in character. Fascism it opposes (witness the recent expulsion of Gen. Rodriguez, of the "Golden Shirts") and while the forms of democracy are preserved, extreme views as to the rights of labor have prevailed since President Cardenas took office in 1934.

Government's Replies To Munitions Shipments Vague.

WITHIN the past week the government has given vague replies to inquiries concerned with its alleged shipment of arms to the Madrid authorities. According to advices from Vera Cruz, the steamship Magallanes has refused to carry passengers on the grounds that it needed the space for the storage of munitions. Radical labor leaders have appealed for funds to send to "those who are fighting for liberty in Spain," though little has been made public as to how much was received from the workers.

In general, though, and without taking too conservative a view of the situation, it is clear that many Mexicans, at least here in the capital, are eager to see the Franco-Mola forces emerge victorious. The Spanish colony, industrious, conservative and closely attached to Spain by reason of family, business and cultural ties, is strongly in favor of checking the extremist attitude of the Azana government. If this could have been done peacefully most of them would have been satisfied. Since it came to war (and the atrocity stories here have been blood-curdling), they want to see communism wiped out.

The French and German colonies are as divided in sentiment as are their countries at home. Although it is to be doubted that French people here are very sympathetic with the Blum group, it should be remembered, also, that the French are patriotic first and Rightest or Leftist afterward. Germans in Mexico have roots that go back far beyond Hitler's time, yet most of them would stand behind the Leader if he determined to stamp out communism in Spain.

Englishmen and Americans maintain the attitude they always have when an international crisis is to be faced. The English worry a bit about European peace, fuss about Gibraltar, and look on with approval as English factories sell airplanes to both sides. The Americans are a bit mystified as to what all the shooting is about, wonder if it will affect business much, and in general are inclined to favor the "Popular Front."

All Classes Considered United Against Communism.

FROM THE standpoint of the various classes, there is no doubt about where sympathies lie. The rich do not underestimate the communist threat. The middle group knows what to expect from the haters of the bourgeoisie. And the masses, though Leftist in sentiment, hesitate to indorse church burnings, and the desecration of shrines that are known and loved wherever Hispanic peoples meet. The church authorities have asked the faithful to pray "for Spain;" there has been no designation of sympathies. But Spain was kind to fugitive Mexicans in the dark days of 1926-1929, and therefore all Spain is remembered in Mexican prayers today.

One must live in Mexico to understand, to grasp and feel the close ties that bind this country to the motherland. Art, literature, commerce, family and cultural relationships cannot be crushed out or broken off simply by painting Spain as a cruel mistress, either in colonial times to her American possessions or in these times to her own children.

From the evidence furnished by the Mexican press, from private conversations and personal observations, it is apparent that all Mexicans deeply regret the present anarchy in Spain. They would be happy to see the motherland advance its position in Europe, open up new political and cultural spheres, better itself economically. At the same time few understand why these things can be done only at the sacrifice of all that Spaniards and Hispanic Americans consider fine and worthwhile in the heritage which both share—racially, culturally, morally.

Beautiful Woman

By William Lyon Phelps.

Adelaide Neilson.

The most beautiful woman I ever saw on the stage was Mary Anderson. I had heard so much of her beauty that I awaited her appearance as Rosalind in the theater that night with eager anticipations. When she came on I was terribly disappointed. She was too thin, for the fashion of those days. But beauty always wins if you keep looking, as music always wins if you keep listening. Before the final fall of the curtain, I had made an unconditional surrender.

But it is possible if I had seen Adelaide Neilson I should have given her the first place. For I have talked with men who saw and heard Adelaide Neilson as Juliet, who all maintain that she was not only the ideal Juliet but the most beautiful woman who ever graced a theater. The only reason I did not see her was because she died before I was 18 years old. I was not allowed to go to the theater until I was 18. I was not allowed to go then, but I went.

• • • •

The life of Adelaide Neilson was as remarkable a drama as any in which she appeared. She called herself Lillian Adelaide Neilson, but her real name was Elizabeth Ann Brown. She was born near Saragossa, in Spain, in 1850, and died in Paris in 1880, only 30 years old. Within those 30 years a good many exciting things happened to her.

When she was a little child, she went to England; was a mill hand at Guiseley, then a nursemaid and then a barmaid. In July, 1865, when she was 15 years old, she appeared in the London stage as Juliet, being the only great Juliet who was close to Shakespeare's Juliet in age—Shakespeare's was 13. She also in the same year appeared at Margate as Julia in Sheridan Knowle's famous play, "The Hunchback."

• • • •

In 1870 she carried everything before her as Amy Robsart, and from that time as a tragedian she had no living English-speaking rival anywhere. She was the idol of the London theater. In 1872 she made a tour of the United States, appearing at Booth's Theater, in New York, as Juliet; she made other tours in America in 1874, 1876 and 1879, appearing in four Shakespeare plays as Rosalind, Beatrice, Juliet and Imogen, and being equally successful as Lady Teazle.

In 1872 she was married to Mr. Philip Lee and was divorced in 1877.

If you want at any time to hear the highest superlatives in descriptions of actresses, just talk with some one who saw Adelaide Neilson.

Forest Fire Burns 6,000 Acres in West

Glacier Park, Mont., Sept. 1 (AP).—The worst forest fire in seven years whipped across the continental divide, cut a quick path of destruction across a popular summer resort and crackled through valuable timber lands while 1,200 foresters battled in vain to check its advance tonight.

Guests in a Glacier Park hotel were forced to flee as the wall of fire—combined flames of three blazes which burned for more than a week—roared down the valley, leveling a tourist camp of 90 cabins and destroying a ranger station.

Superintendent E. T. Scoyen said more than 6,000 acres of timber lands have been burned over. Tonight the fire had leaped the park boundary and was eating into green timber lands along the eastern border.

The Rulers Confer.

("President Roosevelt is reported to be contemplating proposing a conference of the chief rulers of Europe, Stalin, Hitler, Mussolini, Lebrun and King Edward, for the purpose of discussing permanent peace."—News item.)

Mr. Roosevelt (calling for order)—Gentlemen! . . .

Lebrun (pointing to Hitler)—Does that mean him?

Mr. Roosevelt—Now, boys, please! I do not have to tell you the purpose of this gathering. You know the crisis confronting the civilized world . . .

Mussolini—The what?

Mr. Roosevelt—The civilized world.

Mussolini—Oh, that little place!

• • • •

Roosevelt—The world is bleeding. All over Europe we hear the tramp, tramp, tramp of marching armies.

Lebrun (to Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin)—I hope you got that reference to three tramps.

• • • •

Stalin—Knock! Knock!

Roosevelt—Who's there?

Stalin—Tinkle.

Roosevelt—What Tinkle?

Stalin—Tinkle be any chance of us denouncing war?

• • • •

King Edward (fooling around behind a portable bar)—You take the juice of one lime, add a lump of sugar . . .

Mussolini—Who's that fellow?

Hitler—I don't know. I think he's somebody from England.

Mussolini—By the way, whatever became of England.

Hitler—I understand it's still around somewhere.

• • • •

Mussolini—Knock. Knock. It's Lettuce.

Roosevelt—Lettuce who?

Mussolini—Lettuce have peace. Ha! Ha!

• • • •

Roosevelt—War is inexcusable, the policy of might over right has no place in modern statesmanship, the pen is mightier than the sword. Never again shall . . .

Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin—I remember hearing that baloney back in 1918.

Roosevelt—Can't you end your petty jealousies, settle your differences peacefully and restore order in a shattered world? Do you men want war?

Voices—Yes. We have to have 'em in our business.

Roosevelt—What business are you in?

Voices—War business.

• • • •

Roosevelt (passionately)—Are you mice or men? . . .

Hitler (to Lebrun)—He called you a mouse, you rat!

Lebrun—Don't you call me a rat, you dog!

• • • •

Stalin (leaping up)—Somebody pinched my watch!

Stalin—Like what?

Mussolini—Hell! They got mine, too!

(The meeting breaks up in a riot. Mr. Roosevelt escapes through a rear window. Sounds of frightful carnage issue from the building, the walls of which shake and totter. Shots and screams are heard. Mr. Roosevelt stands on the sidewalk below.)

Policeman (accosting him)—What's going on in there?

Mr. Roosevelt—It seems somebody started a peace conference!

Injunction Suit Planned to Balk AAA Milk Pact

Attorney for Independent Dairymen to Seek Writ if Order Is Signed.

Independent dairymen of Maryland and Virginia will bring an injunction in District Court against the AAA "the minute the tentatively approved milk marketing agreement for Washington is made an order," Louis I. Oberth, attorney for the independent dairymen, threatened last night.

Charging that the AAA, on every front, "has treated the independents unfairly," Oberth said the injunction would be sought on the grounds the agreement was unconstitutional.

"The same thing was done successfully in Boston only a couple of months ago," Oberth said. "A milk agreement just like this one was declared unconstitutional. We're going to try—and we believe we can—to do the same thing in the District."

The agreement for the District, which would set up a Federal administrator and materially lower the price paid the producer for his milk, requires Presidential signature before it can be made an order. It was approved tentatively last week by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

"Will Rush It Through."

Although AAA officials say that signatures of one-half of the distributors for the section and two-thirds of the producers raising milk for Washington consumption is required before the tentatively approved agrrement can be made an order, Oberth claimed last night the "AAA will rush this thing through without signatures of the distributors."

Oberth said he was sure the agreement would be made an order within "the next two or three days."

AAA officials had no comment to make.

The Independent Producers' lawyer claimed last night that three meetings, under AAA supervision, were held Monday in three neighboring towns—Fairfax, Frederick and Leesburg.

"The AAA did not give proper notice of these meetings," Oberth claimed. He said the AAA, under the tentatively approved agreement, reached after a heated ten-day hearing, required the Government to announce all such meetings "in the public press."

Sent Private Circulars.

Oberth said his organization, informed of the meetings, sent out private circulars to its members and told them of the meetings.

"Where were 40 or 50 producers at the Frederick meeting," he said. "But if we hadn't been tipped off to it and sent out circulars, there wouldn't have been that many."

The AAA officials were sent to the three meetings, it was understood, to explain to the farmers the workings of the marketing agreement.

"At Frederick," Oberth claimed, "the AAA representative was hooted out of the place."

Meanwhile, the Washington Consumers Council, which has bitterly fought the agreement from the time of the first hearing, continued its antagonism to the proposal, claiming:

"It won't give the producer a chance."

Smith Versus Stengle.

Col. Charles I. Stengle's most dangerous opponent for the presidency of the A. F. G. E. is likely to be John R. W. Smith, president of War Department Lodge No. 92, of New York.

Smith, from present indications, seems to be in an ideal position to capitalize on all the sentiment, from various quarters, against the conservative leaders who are backing Stengle.

From the viewpoint of the so-called New Deal lodges who are Stengle's bitterest opponents Smith would be an ideal candidate. Not only is he a "liberal," but his connection with an old-time civil service lodge would help blunt the attack of the conservatives on the New Deal wing. An ardent patriot, who opens his lodge meetings with a salute to the flag, Smith need hardly fear the "red" brush.

Coming from New York, Smith also would be well situated to pick up additional support from those New York delegates who still resent their defeat last year for the national vice presidency. Of even greater significance, however, is that Smith is the sort of candidate Babcock is most likely to swing his support to should he decide not to run for re-election himself.

We have never met Smith, but we have been told that he is a tall, fairly well built man in his early fifties. An active member of the N. F. F. E., Smith withdrew from that organization when it split with the American Federation of Labor and assisted in organizing the War Department Employes Association. When the A. F. G. E. was formed, the War Department association was merged.

The sort of a campaign Smith will wage should be fairly clear from this statement of his which we received from his lodge yesterday:

"The administration of government employe organizations must be based on exceptionally honest, democratic principles. Government employe organization should be exemplary in upholding freedom of speech and tolerance of the opinions of minority groups. The suspension and recall of individuals or groups within the membership should not be made the only basis on which interlodge communication regarding the fitness of officers and candidates is allowed. On the other hand, recall should be resorted to only when all possible available remedies have been tried and found hopeless.

"The only 'ism' that should motivate Government employes is Americanism, but it should not be the penalty, because of differences of opinion, that members be branded as 'reds' or that other stigmas should be applied to them without justification.

"I believe that all of the differences now threatening the A. F. G. E. should be amicably solved. It is my conviction that the first aim of this organization should be to smooth out its differences at the coming convention, then we should get aboard the same boat and pull the same strokes."

Our colleagues on the news staff have asked us to thank Helen Philibert, of the Navy press relations section, for her splendid co-operation when the story of the bombing of the Destroyer Kane by a Spanish airplane broke Sunday. We do so with pleasure.

Katherine A. Frederic, of the National League of Women Voters, has joined the staff of the president's committee on administrative management, which is studying the functions of the Federal agencies and their executive responsibilities.

Frank T. Bell, commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries, will preside at the annual meeting of the American Fishery Society opening today at Grand Rapids, Mich. Besides Bell, Drs. H. F. Davis and F. F. Hildebrand and Elmer Higgins are attending the meeting from the bureau.

There are more than 550 junior colleges in this country, according to a survey just completed by Dr. Walter J. Greenleaf, specialist in higher education for the Office of Education.

Banner Week Will Conclude Lake Summer

By Chanticleer.

The closing week at Chevy Chase Lake is going to be the biggest of the season, if the attractions held out mean anything. As a special concession to Old Man Summer, who is going to fade fast from now on, the lake management is providing an entire evening's diversion for 35 cents, starting at 8:30 and including dancing to Lee Fields and his orchestra, floor show at 10:30 with changing talent from night to night, and a continuous game of bingo under the auspices of the Costello post of the American Legion.

Chic Farmer is the new star wowing the people at the Cocoanut Grove—a young fellow with a reputation to live up to: a year and a half at the Stork Club in New York and late of Montreal's Embassy Club. Also new: Bourban and Bayne, another top-notch dance team; Betty Cooper, "home town girl who makes good"; Muriel Byrd, another songstress and also from the Embassy Club, whose likeness will be found elsewhere on this page, and a bevy of Chester Doherty girls.

Prince Sergie Abagoff is now at the Club Volga Boatman. He's the very latest importation from the steppes, specialized in those whirling, swirling, dazzling Russian dance steps. He supported Anna Sablukova of the lovely voice. And it should be mentioned that Lew Bierman is back at the Roof's drums, with a new collection of intimate ditties.

Speaking of royalty in talent, the Mayfair has a countess. She is Countess I. de Bourna, numerologist and psychic reader. Ah, and does she reveal the past and forecast the future! Get all set for your reading because the countess sees all, hears all—and brothers and sisters—she tells all!

The patrons of Brinkley's, the popular gathering spot down southeast way, amused themselves recently by checking over the comeliness of the femmes present. And the decision: Brinkley's has more pretty girl customers per table than any other spot in town.

Brian and Winsome bring some all-American dances to the Shoreham Terrace this week in contrast to the large number of foreign stars who recently have been featured. The bill also includes Jackie Young, who is bent on Fred Astair's tap reputation, and Ethel Parker, in impersonations and capers.

Not so American at the Dude Ranch, Louana is the big attraction in a demonstration of how the hula hula should be done. And may I whisper—a veil dance, too. Also: Milton and Marge in tap and clog routines.

• • • •

Everything is being pointed now at Maryland Club Gardens to the week of September 14, which incidentally sees this popular suburban spot return to the Winter Gardens quarters after many, many summer evenings under the stars. Special acts are being brought from the Atlantic City Steel Pier for a water circus the final week. There'l even be a family of trained lions. Grrrrr!

Featured this week at the Lotus: Lenora's Debutantes in a very snappy revue, as 'twere. Plenty of novelty numbers in the show, which runs to some 45 minutes in length. Highlighted are Connie Lee and Odett Brode in a fast rhythm dance, and Betty O'Grady, soft shoe specialist.

One of the charms of Boulevard Farms is its rough-hewn log interior—and a dance floor of 1,800 square feet is a novelty in any nightery. Some 250 couples can be accommodated.

The Ray Sisters are taking honors at La Paree this week in rhythm routines and a bit they call a toreador dance. Doc Marcus, who learned his tricks from Thurston, does a few sleight-of-hand feats. And last, but not least, is Betty Lou.

Those vegetables on the menus at Griffith Farms are from the gardens on the expansive grounds. Host McNey calls the garden a "patch," but there's a difference when the victuals are fresh out of the ground and they really shouldn't be subjected to such a capricious consideration.

Singin' the Blues at Cocoanut Grove

Muriel Byrd is among the newcomers this week at Cocoanut Grove where an entirely new show is on view. Muriel is not an ordinary blues singer. No, sir, she's a blues contralto!

Kibitzing Fans Tell Film Stars Whom to Marry

John Q. Public Suggests Numberless Mismatches; Mae's Numerology.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 1.—Will super-masculine Clark Gable marry super-feminine Mae West? Probably not, but you'd be surprised how many movie fans think it would be a swell idea.

Kibitzing the motion picture marriage market is apparently the favorite indoor sport of those who take film players seriously enough to write letters to and about them. Several hundred during the past month have urged Mae to flee altarward with the virile Gable, and vice versa.

Robert Taylor, the high school girls' delight, is another favorite target for the amateur matchmakers. Hundreds have written him long letters arguing advantages of marriage with Barbara Stanwyck, Janet Gaynor, Virginia Bruce, Loretta Young or Eleanor Powell. A few lately have even suggested he team up with Greta Garbo, prominent Swedish iceberg.

Present Ties Ignored.

Fans often are ignorant of actors' current marital ties or blithely disregard them. Fred Astaire, for example, a married man, is constantly urged to wed Eleanor Powell and raise little tapdancers.

William Powell's followers apparently won't rest until he marries Jean Harlow, Mary Brian, Elizabeth Allan, Madge Evans, Steffi Duna, Joan Blondell, Tallulah Bankhead, or his ex-wife, Carole Lombard.

Some other combinations highly favored by fans are Jean Harlow and Dick Powell, Luise Rainer and Ronald Colman, Lombard and Henry Fonda, Lyle Talbot and Rosalind Russell, Dixie Dunbar and Edward Norris, and—believe it or not—W. C. Fields and Edna May Oliver.

Mae Goes Astrological.

Buxom, middle-aged Mae West—that gal's here again—has just gotten a planetary lowdown on her future, and is hugging her ample self because her "magnetism is just reaching its highest point."

That, she says, is what the stars tell her—the kind you gander through telescopes, not the kind manufactured in bulk by publicity agents. Mae has fallen hard for astrology, and is riding the crest of a wave of eights.

The head astrologer discovered Mae was born August 17 (she was 44), and concluded eight is her lucky number because figures of her birthdate add up to eight.

To make matters luckier, Mae's part of August is ruled by one Leo, the lion—a zodiacal sign, not the M-G-M mascot—and it seems this Leo is a fool for eights in his own right.

Culbertson on Bridge

Don't Hoard Trumps.

The tenacity with which many players hold on to their trumps might well lead a nonbridge-playing kibitzer to assume that one of the primary objects of the game might be to win the last trick. A defender's trumps should not be one bit more sacred to him than any other of his potential trick-takers.

I have shown in this column many hands in which a superabundance of trumps caused a real embarrassment to their owner. Today I shall analyze a hand that was played in a recent national tournament. It will be seen that a trump-hoarding tendency of the West player resulted in a material swing against him.

Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's two diamond response was, in my opinion, responsible for putting the pair in a ticklish situation. Either two hearts or one no trump would have been better. To the former, South should pass; to the latter, he would bid two clubs and, when taken back to two hearts, would let the contract rest there.

West's first mistake in the play was to open the ace of spades. His partner's double of diamonds should have indicated the ace of diamonds as the safest opening lead. Dummy covered the spade jack with the queen, and East's king went to declarer's ace. A low heart now was led toward dummy and West, apparently deciding to hold on to his high honors for dear life, played the eight spot; dummy's jack won and the bad trump situation was revealed by East's discard of a low spade. The king and ace of clubs were played and a third round ruffed, after which the ten of spades was cashed and followed with the eight of spades, which East covered and on which both declarer and West discarded a diamond. East now led a diamond and declarer ruffed. He then ruffed a fourth round of clubs with dummy's last trump.

At this stage West had nothing left but hearts, so all the declarer had to do was lead a diamond and throw a club on it. West was forced to ruff and, therefore, had to play up to declarer's heart king.

In all, the defenders made only four tricks, and the less than game bid, by virtue of the fulfilled double, gave North and South a vulnerable game.

What a difference if West had not been so penurious with his trumps! Even after the opening lead, the contract should have been set two tricks.

West should have jumped up with his heart queen and returned the ace and a low heart, cleaning the dummy in one fell swoop.

The Heart Interest in a Thriller

Having made her screen debut as leading woman with Al Jolson in "The Singing Kid," Beverly Roberts, whose smiling likeness appears above, will be seen next in a similar capacity with Pat O'Brien in "China Clipper," a dramatic thunderbolt of a totally different nature. As its name implies, "China Clipper" concerns adventures high in the air aboard flying ships that hop oceans at will. Ross Alexander and Humphrey Bogart also are in the cast. "China Clipper" opens on the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday for a week's engagement.

About The Showshops

THIS Fred Astaire fellow is quite a dancer.

If you had never suspected it before, you will after witnessing his performance with Ginger Rogers, Victor Moore, Helen Broderick, Eric Blore, Georges Metaxa and divers and sundry others in "Swing Time," coming to RKO-Keith's on Friday.

BELL.

A projection-room audience that packed the bandbox theater at the Fox Film Exchange Monday night came away convinced that Manager Meakin has another long-run feature for his refurbished Fifteenth street citadel of the celluloids in this one.

Dancing is what an audience expects of Fred Astaire and dancing is what it gets in "Swing Time." While he does a trifle more solo work in this subject than in previous vehicles, Ginger Rogers still comes in for her share of approbation as a peerless partner for Fred in several of the most intricate routines they have ever executed before the cameras together. The waltz, which they do together, and the "Bojangles" number, in which Fred dances alone with a background ensemble of line girls and later with three of his own shadows, are items that will knock the customers for the customary loop, in a manner of speaking.

The story of this one is not too hot, as such things go, but enough to lace the musical numbers and dances together into a loose dramatic pattern that is quite overshadowed by the glittering opulence of the night club dancing sequences.

The comedy vein throughout the picture is more pronounced than the romantic. Whether anyone has ever noticed it or not, Fred Astaire is as agile a light comedian as he is dancer, and Ginger Rogers, left to her own natural impulses, is hardly to be numbered among the greatest of tragediennes. Over and above the engaging ebulliences of these two are the more mature comicalities of that eminent living Caspar Milquetoast, Victor Moore—old Alexander Throttlebottom himself—and Helen Broderick, one of the theater's most eminent lady clowns.

Georges Metaxa, the film's romantic "threat," could safely be intrusted with more singing than he has been permitted to do, as those who recall Jerome Kern's "The Cat and the Fiddle" will testify.

Perhaps the most amazing thing about Astaire's dancing in this picture is his astonishing change of pace. It has always seemed to this column that Bill "Bojangles" Robinson—and I wonder if that name has anything to do with Fred Astaire's dancing the number in blackface?—commanded more tempos and more rhythms with his inspired pedals than any other contemporary "hoofer". After watching the Astaire "dogs" picking themselves up and laying themselves down in "Swing Time," I am inclined to revise my estimate.

Very probably a review of this particular "moom pitcher" will appear here Saturday morning, along with some others. Hope the wait won't wear you down too much.

A new note is being struck in this week so tightly packed with screen previews. The Warner executives in Washington, prompted by Zone Manager John J. Payette, still convalescent from his recent joust with the sawbones, have hit upon a "critics' holiday" to be celebrated today at the Congressional Country Club.

A motor caravan will leave the Earle Theater today at 1, bearing the local drayma desks to an afternoon of golf, tennis, swimming, rocking-chair dozing, or what'll you have? At 4:30 that iniquitous interval known as the "cocktail hour" will be observed, followed by dinner at 6. Pursuant to all this frolicking about, will come the screening of "Anthony Adverse," the Warner Brothers' picturization of the Hervey Allen 1,224-pager, to be shown on the screen at the Earle beginning Friday, September 11.

In the quaint Napoleonic language of Cicerone Frank La Falce, it is set forth in the summons to all this gayety that no printed word will be expected before Friday. Smart feller, this Mr. La Falce! Reminds me of the newspaper editor who once ran a notice on his front page which said, "Tomorrow being the Fourth of July, and knowing the members of my staff as I do, there will be no further publication of this paper for two weeks!"

* * * *

Those planning a Labor Day outing at Atlantic City, will be interested to learn that following last year's successful experiment the Steel Pier will be open for 66 continuous hours over the holiday week-end. The Boardwalk doors of this famous institution will not be closed from 8 a. m., Saturday, September 5, to 2 a. m., Tuesday, September 8.

Also, as was the case last year, Leo Carrillo, one of the theater's most delightful personalities and most agreeable gentlemen, will headline the vaudeville bill on the Pier.

Last season, Mr. Carrillo told this column between shows that on the Sunday before Labor Day the Pier had played to something like 88,000 people, if memory serves correctly. That is quite a few people in any man's arithmetic.

* * * *

One thing more about that "Anthony Adverse" engagement at the Earle. While the regular daily presentations will begin on Friday, September 11, as already recited, a special midnight showing will be given at 11:15 p. m., Thursday, September 10. This will be the first midnight preview at the Earle in many months. Tickets for this special performance are now on sale at all of the Warner Brothers theaters in the Capital. It might be well to snap them up, since "Anthony Adverse" consumes an abnormal running time and its engagement at the Earle is limited to a single week.

* * * *

With so many premieres of important motion pictures in prospect, it might be well to offer a reminder that its 101st season of living drama will be inaugurated at the National Theater on Monday night, September 28, with Max Gordon's production of "St. Helena," with Maurice Evans in the role of Napoleon. Mr. Evans will be remembered as the Romeo in Katharine Cornell's memorable stage production of "Romeo and Juliet" at the same theater. "St Helena" is now in preparation under the direction of Robert B. Sinclair, who staged "Pride and Prejudice" for Mr. Gordon last year. Announcing a Mox Gordon "first night" in Washington is equivalent to heralding the advent of another sure-fire Broadway hit. Check back over the records and see for yourself.

I told you it would get warmer again before it got colder. Well, anyhow, I meant to—and maybe they needed some new paving material down there!

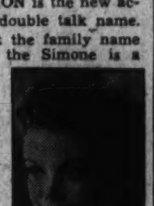
Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky.

Newcomer.

Hollywood, Sept. 1.

SIMONE SIMON is the new actress with the double talk name. She claims that the family name is Simon, and the Simone is a girl's name and was given to her. The word, Simone, is supposed to mean storm. She says it doesn't. Most articles and talk about her have been exaggerated. She is an actress whose career stretches easily.



SIMONE SIMON.

She does things by instinct, acts on impulses, saying or doing the first thing she thinks. Then she will say, "I suppose you believe I am temperamental. I am not." She likes to make an impression immediately and always. About the middle of the first act you really get to know her.

She was born at Marseille, France, on April 23, 1914, on a Sunday at 1 o'clock in the morning. She is an only child.

She would have you believe that she was a quiet child. She was given toys to make noises with and wouldn't do it. She didn't like to play with dolls. She didn't like to play with girls.

* * * *

She doesn't speak about her background except to provide these facts: At the age of 4 she moved to Madagascar. Then on to Vienna, Budapest, Berlin, Brussels and Paris. She attended 12 schools, and is the first of her clan to take to the theater.

* * * *

Her first performance was when she was about 10, and she had seen a movie, and imitated the actress for her friends. Her first professional performance was when she was 17, on the Paris stage, having a line in a mob scene.

She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 117 pounds, has brown hair, blue eyes, a turned-up nose, a dimple on her right cheek and is ticklish.

She is peppy and energetic. She seldom sits long in a chair. She likes to play tennis and dance. She doesn't go to bed until completely exhausted. "Then I stop," she says, "to give the battery a needed recharging."

* * * *

She is fond of perfumes. She has a special perfume for the day and one for the night. In the daytime she has a perfume "that smells like leather." For the night a perfume "that smells like flowers."

She doesn't like to shake hands and say "hello" to people.

Before the preview of "Girls' Dormitory," she was very much alone. She seldom went out, and then it was with one of the Hollywood agents who are the town's dancing partners. She tells the story:

"The Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday before the preview, I was alone at home, and nobody called me on the telephone. I went to the preview with the studio crowd. After the preview, I was invited to the Trocadero. On Saturday I was asked to dinner at the home of a big producer. On Sunday I was taken to the beach house of an important actress.

"Now my phone rings and I can have a date every night. This is what you call fame, eh?"

Sylvan Theater

The Community Center Department presents, as the twelfth summer festival program, the Tempo Choral Society, under the direction of Dr. W. Scott Mayo, assisted by J. Obelton Holmes, tenor; Ruth Robinson, reader; E. E. Ayres, bass; the Temp Quartet, Frankie Crowder, soprano, and T. Curtis Mayo, pianist. At the National Sylvan Theater. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

With the singing of the Negro spiritual, "Steal Away to Jesus," as a fitting benediction, the Tempo Choral Society brought to a close its recital and the 1936 festival season. No earlier season of al fresco bills has been so excellent or so professionally presented.

Twenty-four numbers were included in the program, which was further augmented by three encores and two numbers repeated by request. From a popular standpoint, "Joshua Fit de Battle of Jericho" (Rosamond Johnson), with Dr. W. Scott Mayo singing the solo part, and "Exhortation" (Cook) as a bass solo by E. E. Ayres, were the outstanding, these being the numbers repeated.

J. Obelton Holmes sang, as tenor solo, Fisher's "I've Been in the Storm So Long," and Heilman's "New Born Again." Mr. Ayres' other selection was Burleigh's "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen," Frankie Crowder did Burleigh's "My Way's Cloudy," and Boatner's "On Ma' Journey." The quartet—Mr. Jones, Malcolm Taylor, Emerson Johnson, William Payne—rendered Parks' "Lead Us, O Father," and the spirituals, "Crying Holy Unto the Lord" and "O Lord I've Done Done."

As further diversion, Ruth Robinson read Dunbar's "People Will Talk" and T. Curtis Mayo played Brahms' "Ballade in G Minor" as a piano solo.

Excellently staged, with off stage prelude, processional and recessional, quiet dignity made the scene impressive.

The Red Pavilion

By Pauline Stiles

The Marriage.

The little morning room at the rear of the upper hall was empty. The door had scarcely closed, when Mal, who seemed to be adding to his stature as each moment passed burst out impetuously:

"Thank you, Miss Manners, for that beautiful experience. You will never know what it has done for me. I was in the depths of despair here tonight. Then when you began to speak and I heard you . . . every word . . . as clear as a bell—reaching me in a horrible uproar . . . to guide me out of it . . . to help me—I can't tell you!"

"My dearest boy, I've never had anything so beautiful said to me!"

Mal went on devouring her face and words with a wild sort of joy.

"We are to be friends now, aren't we?"

"Didn't you hear me claim you?"

"Your voice, Miss Manners! It's so clear and perfect—"

"Yes. I have a nice voice."

"It—heals something in me. I could listen to it forever!"

"You shall—forever and ever," intoned Miss Manners' voice down into Mal's consciousness with something like a knell. "It's an art to listen as you do, my dear Roger Mallard. It inspired me. I excelled myself tonight. It was because of the way I saw you listening. . . . Now then, tell me all about yourself. What are you doing? Are you going to be as important to the theater as your parents were? I was mad about them as a kid—when they were with the Stratford players."

Mal informed her with an impatient shrug that he didn't care to talk about himself. Rather he wished to know everything about her. "I must make up for all the time I haven't known you. I must keep on hearing your lovely voice."

Miss Manners laughed delightedly and at once allowed him to hear it. She began by telling him where she lived, apologizing for the neighborhood, which a temporary state of being on her uppers made necessary. She, too, had been in despair when she came here tonight. . . ."

As each sentence came from her lips, Mal grew more and more possessively alert. His aloof manner, now changed completely, was warmed and colored by laughter and wit and his old spontaneous charm.

Miss manners watched him intently from under her lashes.

"Mr. Mallard," she said suddenly, "have you ever had a screen test?"

"A what?"

"A test—"

"I'm done with tests!" Mal exclaimed. "I don't need them any more—now I've met you—"

"No—you don't undertsand me. You have some of the most extraordinary good looks I've ever seen, and a something vibrant and mystifying in your personality. It occurred to me that you would photograph stunningly. Have you ever thought of acting in the cinema?"

"Certainly not!" said Mal with disgust.

Love for the Land.

Mal told Zelda that his nomadic, uncertain upbringings as a child and a godson of actors had cured him of stage ambitions—postively set him against them, in fact. Then, too, as the war had rather crocked him up a bit, he'd thought of farming, perhaps out in Canada or Arizona. He loved the land—to see things grow—to be alone in vast empty spaces—

"Farming!" cried Miss Manners in her clearest tones. "With a face and figure and voice like yours! What nonsense! You're destined for great things with your experience, your innate and inherited talent and reared as you've been from birth in the theater's best traditions. No—you shall follow your true profession, my dear friend. And I shall be your inspiration. Why there's a fortune in you!"

Mal laughed.

"I'd be willing to attempt anything if Miss Manners were included in the attempt."

Apparently the ardor with which he said this greatly moved her. She gave him a long look from under her level eyelids. Then she reached up and clasped both hands about his head and drew it slowly down toward her.

"His mouth is most sweet!" said Miss Manners, and long and slowly kissed it.

"We must be careful," she whispered, as she at last freed herself from his arms.

"I've got to see you soon," he managed brokenly. "May I come tomorrow?"

"Come tonight."

"Let us go at once!"

"No—wait a minute. Mr. Chetwyn brought me here. And Alfred can be difficult."

"Who is he?" Mal fiercely asked.

"Now—now! Just a slightly middle-aged cousin who beaus me about. I'll get rid of him. . . . Come in about an hour. . . ."

As Mal pushed his way through the crowd toward the stairs, unmindful of the indignant looks cast in his direction because of his precipitous haste, he bumped into Grimwold.

"I say, old chap, have you seen a vision? You look like a different person."

"I am. I never knew till tonight what happiness could be."

Grimwold smiled with relieved delight.

"What's become of that adorable girl?"

"She had to go home."

"Better call soon, Mal. That's the kind for you."

"Don't I know it! O, I say, Grimmy, I'm off. I am going to start this New Year's right."

A month later, Grimwold indulged in grave doubts about the rightness of Mal's start. He was smoking a pipe beside his fire at Mrs. Tibbs', musing contentedly upon Mal's metamorphosis, and hoping to be summoned by du Maurier for a part in his play, when the door burst open and Mal triumphantly led Zelda Manners into the room. Grimwold's heart turned cold when he saw how blindly and completely the boy had tumbled.

"Grimmy," Mal said, and paused to cast a bedazzled glance at Zelda's demure, downbent face, "I've just married the loveliest girl in all the world."

Grimwold rose and faced them with a slightly sagging jaw.

"We've come for your blessing before we start off on our week's honeymoon," Mal went on exultantly. "Look at her, Grimmy. Was ever an undeserving chap so lucky?"

Grimwold gave Mal's luck a dubious stare.

Zelda blushed charmingly and murmured:

"I didn't want to disturb you, Mr. Grimwold. But Mal refused to send a wire—insisted on coming to tell you himself."

"What are you whispering about, Zelda?"

"That what I told you was true. A wire would have allowed Mr. Grimwold to recover from his shock in private," Zelda laughed gently.

Grimwold could never remember whether his blessing had been bestowed or not, so exuberant was Mal's elation, so studied was Mrs. Mallard's manner of the starry-eyed bride, and so great was his own consternation. He believed he'd taken refuge in pouring out some drinks."

"You'll forgive me, won't you, Grimmy, for not telling you about it?" Mal earnestly asked. "Zelda had private reasons for keeping it secret. You're the first to know."

Grimwold raised his glass, and finally managed a rather lame mutter.

"I hope you'll both be happy."

"Don't waste any hopes on that, Grimmy! It's already accomplished."

Grimwold saw the bride's demureness ruffled by a fleeting look of speculation.

Grimwold now saw the groom's ecstasy ruffled by a look of uneasy bewilderment.

"What's she saying to you, Grimmy?"

"Something about promises you've made her."

"O—that," said Mal.

Zelda linked an arm through his and looked up to smile at him.

"Mal has the most fantastic notions about some sort of rural life having to do with the land. Don't you agree with me, Mr. Grimwold, that he should follow his logical calling?"

"What do you think of a bride, Grimmy," Mal inquired dryly, "who, in the taxi coming from the registrar, is more interested in her husband's career than in his love making? Let's not go over that again, Zelda. I suppose I'll ultimately agree to be even a poor actor now that I've got you for my leading lady."

"No. Just your blessing Grimmy."

"But this is a wedding present," Grimwold insisted, and put the bills into the bride's half-opened hand.

Mal's smile was replaced by a tiny frown as he watched Zelda competently put the bills into her handbag.

"Thanks—awfully. But remember, Zelda and I are on our own now." Grimwold cleared his throat. "How about your room here?"

"Give it up," Mal said uncomfortably. "Cheaper quarters will have to do us for awhile."

Zelda chimed in with a hopeful little laugh.

"Just wait till my husband is rich and famous, and you shall have a suite with us, Mr. Grimwold, somewhere in Mayfair."

Mal now led his wife back to the door.

"Cheerio, Grimmy," he said, trying not to let his voice sound as emotional as he felt. "I'll run in to see you when the honeymoon is over. . . ."

Continued Tomorrow.

League Armed Force To Keep Peace Urged

Geneva, Sept. 1 (AP).—New Zealand, suggesting League of Nations reform, today presented a memorandum advocating the creation of an international land, sea and air force to be placed at the disposition of the League to combat warmakers.

National plebiscites were suggested to approve the contribution of armed forces to the League. The separation of the League Covenant from post-war treaties also was urged.

Dorothy J. Dodge Weds Bolling Powell, Jr., Here

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Dodge Married to Birmingham Man in Cathedral Chapel; Rev. Freeland Peter Officiates.

By Marylyn Reeve.

St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral was the scene of the wedding yesterday of Miss Dorothy Joy Dodge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Armour Dodge, and Mr. Bolling R. Powell, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs Bolling Powell, of Birmingham, Ala. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Freeland Peter.

The altar was decorated with two baskets of white gladioli, and the mellow glow of the Cathedral candles mingled with the rays of the setting sun through the windows.

The guests were seated by Mr. John Rolfe Powell and Mr. Gordon Lewis, the ushers. The bride's attendants were costumed in velvet. Miss Katherine Hall, the maid of honor, was attired in a delicate shade of peach, her small velvet turban having a rippled brim of matching tulle. Miss Betty Hartford and Mrs. Karl Michelet wore frocks and hats of the same design, but of vivid corals. All carried sheaf bouquets of contrasting gladioli.

Reception Held at Hotel.

Miss Dodge, who entered on the arm of her father, wore a gown of cream lace over satin. The fitted bodice was finished with a turn-over collar. Her veil of illusion was caught to a lace coronet and fell to the end of her lace and satin train. A shorter veil covered her face.

Mr. Arnold Powell was best man.

After the ceremony there was a reception in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel. The room was banked with ferns, palms and varicolored autumn flowers. Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Powell received with their son and daughter. The former was gowned in brown velvet, her small hat of the same shade trimmed with flame. The bridegroom's mother wore aquamarine lace. Both had corsages of orchids.

To one side of the minor panelled room was the bride's table, all in white. The cake was topped with a sugar cathedral. When the long parade of "well-wishers" had finally passed, the young couple left their places in the receiving line and were the first to dance.

Among the guests were several newly married couples, including Mr. and Mrs. Merton A. English, jr., the latter in black and gray; Mr. and Mrs. Winton Elliott, the latter in white, with accents of red. Then there was Miss Suzanne Hill, in a red and white flowered frock with a picture hat of black starched linen, who was escorted by Mr. Phillips Huntington Clarke, her fiance.

Others Among Guests.

Others there were Miss Jane Thorpe in white, with a navy blue coat; Mrs. A. Smith Bowman, in white crepe with a wide-brimmed hat, accompanied by Mrs. Smith Bowman and Mr. Delong Bowman, her sons; Mr. Waverly Taylor, Miss Janet Harrison, in ruby crepe; Miss Sarah Harrison, her sister, in black and white; Miss Jeanne Richards, wearing a bright printed frock; Mr. William Mitchell and Mr. Kent Dyer.

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, in maize crepe with a wide-brimmed baku hat of the same shade, was accompanied by her two daughters —Miss Alice Tuckerman, in honey pebble crepe, who is to make her debut this season, and Miss Ruth Tuckerman, in smartly tailored navy blue. The latter, with her sister, Miss Laura Tuckerman, returned from Southampton Monday.

Mrs. William Laird Dunlop was attired in wine-colored wool crepe and cartwheel felt of the same shade. Also among the guests were her niece, Mrs. Hans Faber, and the latter's husband. Miss Dee Bucheister and Mr. George Bucheister, her brother, held a court of their own, having just landed from Europe, and stopped off at their Maryland home long enough to pick up their brother, Mr. James Bucheister.

After a motor trip to New England, the bridal couple will go by boat to Sea Island Beach, Ga., and later will continue on to Birmingham, Ala., where they will make their home.

Miss Davidson Wed at Retreat On Shenandoah

Daughter of Mrs. L. K. Riely and Elliott MacSwan Are United.

"Retreat," the old historic colonial home on the Shenandoah River, built by Gen. Thomas Parker, a distinguished Revolutionary officer, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leeds K. Riely, was the scene yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of a beautiful, but quiet wedding, when Miss Jessica Bradley Davidson, daughter of Mrs. Riely, of Clarke County, Va., and Mr. Bradley Davidson, of New York, became the bride of Mr. Elliott Bancroft MacSwan, son of Mrs. John MacSwan, of Natick, Mass. The Rev. Dr. Sydnor, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Charles Town, W. Va., officiated.

The ceremony was performed in the large living room before an improvised altar banked with summer flowers, and the decorations throughout the house were roses, delphiniums and early fall flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of exquisite old satin from the Orient, on which the figures of pomegranates were outlined in gold thread. The material was brought from China some years ago by the bride's maternal grandfather, the late Mrs. Paul Kelly, of Clarke County, formerly of Milwaukee. The gown was made on simple lines with a high boat neck and a long train. Her tulle veil, which reached to the end of her train and hung from a coronet of old lace, was featured on either side with orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book.

Miss Elizabeth McGill, of Baltimore, was maid of honor and the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of pale pink organdy made with a redingote trimmed with blue, and carried delphinium and pink roses.

Mr. MacSwan had as his best man, Mr. William Bartrum Jackson, of Nutley, N. J. The bride, who is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Davidson, of Washington, divided her time as a girl between this city and Baltimore. She is a graduate of Greenwood, in Baltimore; also of Holton Arms, here.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. MacSwan will make their home in Hyannis, Mass., where he holds a position.

A reception followed the wedding yesterday. Among those present, who were the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Riely, were: Miss Louise Davidson, aunt of the bride, Mrs. Emory Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Thomas, Mrs. John Davidson and son, Mr. John Davidson and Mrs. Lyle Wilson all of Washington.

Debut Set Oct. 24 For Miss St. George

Event Slated to Be Held at Tuxedo Park.

A debut scheduled for October 24 at Tuxedo Park, N. Y., which is of interest in Washington, is that of Miss Priscilla St. George, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. St. George. Mrs. St George is a sister of the late Warren Delano Robbins, before his death our Minister to Canada, and frequently visited in Washington when her brother was chief of protocol

Mr. and Mrs. St. George and their daughter are in Austria, and will sail next week for this country. They attended te music festival in Salzburg and spent some time in England.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Halifax County, Va., will be the mecca for many British Embassy attaches and other younger members of the Diplomatic Corps next week, when Miss Eva Mark-Wardlaw, daughter of the assistant naval attache of the British Embassy, Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, R. N., and Mrs. Mark Wardlaw will be crowned queen of the second National Tobacco Festival, to be held there.

Somehow there seems a poetic justice about this, for it was an Englishman, Sir Walter Raleigh, who first acquainted the world with Virginia tobacco. The festival will take place in South Boston, Halifax County, as Colonial a town as can be found anywhere in the United States, and the entertainments and the participants therein both are remindful of the early days of American history.

Family traditions and ancestral homes abound in Halifax County and the scions of old families will tell you all about the great men and women who have emerged from this strip of Virginia soil. In particular, they like to point out "Woodlawn," the home of John Powell, American musician and the birthplace of Virginia's most famous sculptress, Edith Stevens Parsons. Pearl Buck is a modern author who frequently has written of Halifax County, which she visits occasionally in order to keep in touch with its atmosphere.

Those who have watched the extensive repairs which have been going on both to the exterior and the interior of the Polish Embassy on Sixteenth street have noted with interest that one of the final touches has been the placing of the national seal of Poland over the entrance.

Which reminds us that one of the features of old Connecticut avenue, most missed by visitors who knew Washington of 10 or 15 years ago, is the huge iron lion and the unicorn of Great Britain, which used to guard the gates of the old embassy at the corner of Connecticut avenue and N street, now a gas station.

Mr. Edward Kulikowski, Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy, has returned to Washington after a month's trip through New England. After Mr. Sokolowski, the retiring Charge d'Affaires of the Polish Embassy, sails next week, Mr. Kulikowski will be acting Charge d'Affaires until the arrival of the Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki.

Woman Fills Role of Wire Office Chief

Lena Geesa Is Manager of Postal's Largest Station in City.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IN A LITTLE TOWN on Long Island a number of years ago a tiny Italian girl stood outside a railway station, pressed her face against a window pane and watched a telegraph operator send a message. His intent expression fasinated her. The clacking of the telegraph key was music to her ears. If she could only learn how to send a message by wire! She would—someday . . .

The child who dreamed became the woman who made her dreams come true. Today, Lena Loria Geesa, standing 5 feet high on her 3-inch French heels, is manager of the Postal Telegraph's largest and busiest Washington office. Furthermore, she holds the record of being the first, the youngest and the smallest woman manager of a telegraph branch in the District of Columbia.

Despite the dignity of her bearing and her lady-like coronet coiffure, this pretty, olive-complexioned girl looks as though her age might still be in the 'teens.

With Company 18 Years.

"Oh, but it couldn't be," she said yesterday, a smile displaying her pearly, even teeth. "You see, I've been working with this company almost 18 years."

She had finished her second year in high school when she decided to go to work, she said.

"So one morning I started out with a lunch under my arm and the hope in my heart that I could land a job in a telegraph office," she explained.

Before noon, she had one. She was a file clerk. By the end of the day, she had made up her mind that before long, she would learn telegraphy. Thomas P. Dowd, local Postal superintendent, recalls that 17 years ago the tiny file clerk told him of her ambition.

"Then I began studying," said Miss Geesa. "The only time I had was after hours at night. But I loved it! And you can't imagine how thrilled I was the day Mr. Dowd suggested that I take a key in competition with some expert operators. Luck was with me. The showing I made then led to my first job as manager. I took over the Shoreham Hotel office."

Eight Men Preceded Her.

Four years ago, she was promoted to her present position, where eight men had preceded her.

"There was a good deal of skepticism about whether a woman could fill the place," she admitted. "Plenty of persons were convinced that only a man could do it."

But since she has taken over the office in the National Press Building, business has tripled. She and the four girls under her keep things humming to a tune that make all other branch staffs in town sit up and take notice.

Climbing from a job as file clerk to a position as manager "has been hard work, every step of the way," Miss Geesa admitted. "You have to fight prejudice continuously. So many persons have the idea a woman can't send a telegraph message. Others frankly resent seeing a woman in work men generally negotiate."

Lists Her "Success" Rules.

She believes, however, that any girl of average intelligence can go far in the business world if she concentrates on her job and keeps a specific goal in mind. In her own case, she has done both by following a rigid set of rules, "which might be called the ten commandments for a business girl," she said. They are as follows:

Believe in your job, and put your best into it.

Never make a promise you can't keep.

Use your imagination and initiative to help give greater service to your work.

Be businesslike and efficient.

Smile when you meet a customer. (He isn't interested in your troubles.)

When meeting a customer, show you are really glad to see him. A firm handshake will help; but don't gush.

Never drink nor smoke during business hours.

Keep your appearance up to par. Neatness is a big factor in business success.

"But the girl who truly loves her job doesn't have worry about remembering all of these," she said. "She'll put her best into it anyway. As for my job—well, I would not change places with any woman in Washington."

But what if she should marry? Would she give up her position?

"Oh, I couldn't!" she exclaimed. "I'd have to keep it. I can't imagine myself without it!"

Heels Go Higher In College Shoes

College girls prefer sports shoes but are taking to higher heels, according to a Nation-wide survey. These they wear for all-around activities, including shopping in town, campus and classroom and for week-end jaunts. Brown is the leading color, with dark green next and wine third in popularity. Combinations of colors with brown as the basic tone are popular with all co-eds.

The ghillie, with rubber sole, appears to be a campus must this season—as a companion shoe and delightful change to lend variety in the shoe wardrobe. Interesting new versions of the peasant shoe, where color is introduced in pipings and occasionally in tongues, are being sponsored for snowy weather; also, softer, lighter new interpretations of the ski boot both for outdoor and indoor wear.

For dress-up, there are clever sandals to wear to college teas and cocktail dances. These are usually very conservative, fashioned of suede or dark fabrics and trimmed with patent leather. Formal evening shoes, of the toeless sandal type with high heels in dyeable materials, lead in this realm.

Her Success Story Proves Dreams Come True

MISS LENA LORIA GEESA, manager of a branch telegraph office, fills a position in which eight men had preceded her. She believes business success is within the reach of any woman who knows and obeys the rules she herself has followed for many years.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Youth Is Worried Because His Sweetheart Can't Decide Whether She Wishes to Be Wife or Nun.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last winter at a school I met a girl with whom I fell in love at first sight. She goes to a convent school and I go to a public school. At first she told me she wanted to be a nun. That was before summer vacation. Then one day out of a clear sky she told me she never wanted to be a nun but that she wanted me. Naturally we talked about getting married and having children and a home of our own. Then, when it seemed that everything was perfect and our love was mutual, she again told me that she wished to be a nun. Still later, she changed her mind again and decided she wants me.

• • • •

In three weeks she will go back to school. She won't be permitted to see any fellows. And I am sure she wouldn't if she could; that is, with the exception of me. She doesn't want me to go out with other girls and I won't. But to make a long story short: Will her going back to the convent school make her forget about me, perhaps enough to make her decide again to be a nun? She will be 18 and I will be 21 in a short time. She hurt me once. Will she hurt me again? SUITOR.

DEAR SUITOR: Console yourself with this thought: nearly every girl undergraduate of a convent school from time to time plays with the idea of one day becoming a nun. Usually the thought persists, to the extent of interpolating itself into her conversation and into her ever-changing plans for the future, until after graduation. After that, unless she has a profound inclination toward the religious life, the idea gradually fades into nothingness, and is usually completely forgotten by the end of her first summer following graduation.

• • • •

My advice to you is not to reveal any great anxiety concerning her possible change of heart, as between you and the nunnery. Adopt a tranquil, philosophical attitude of "Whatever you do is all right with me. I want you to be happy." This will be better guaranteed to swing the scales in your favor than pleading, arguing and exacting promises of fidelity.

If, after some weeks or months in the convent school this term, she again notifies you that she has decided against matrimony, and in favor of the religious life, it might be best to start going out with other girls. And this not because there isn't every possibility that she will once more change her mind, but in order to prove to her that she can't keep you dancing on the string of her indecision indefinitely. And also because you are not yet old enough to be ready to settle down to a prolonged period of waiting for one girl who doesn't know her own mind and won't know it, probably, for five or six years yet. M. H.

Careers For Women.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Can you give me a list of positions open to women in the diplomatic service, and the requirements for the positions? Is a law degree essential? Thanking you in advance for this information, I am, sincerely yours, DORA P.

• • • •

DEAR DORA P.: You can get this information by telephoning the State Department, Foreign Personnel division. The number is District 4510, branch 63.

Bachelor Needs Help.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can you advise me where I might find a cleaning woman who would clean a bachelor's apartment twice a week for 50 cents? I have been looking all over for such a person but so far have failed to find anyone interested. What do you suggest? BACHELOR.

• • • •

DEAR BACHELOR: I don't believe you will ever find a cleaning woman who would accept such a job at such a price—and I presume you mean 50 cents for each day such service is performed. You will probably have to raise your price to $1 a day, or $2 for the week's cleaning. If you care to give your name, I can put you in touch with an excellent colored woman who will take care of your apartment at the latter price. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Both Parents Should Share Duty to Child

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

FROM the moment that she knew a baby was coming, Mrs. Smith thought of the child as hers alone. The only duty her husband had from that time on was to supply the means of subsistence for his family. She cared for the child when it was small with a passionate absorption which entirely excluded Mr. Smith. As the child grew older, she made every decision which concerned him, and ran the house for his comfort and benefit, with the father very much in the position of a paying guest.

Such a woman, and there are many of them, should adopt children instead of producing them. No real home can be founded on so one-sided a base as the Smiths'. It is far better for the children to have no father, than having one, to be unaware of him.

The mother should see to it that he has two parents, for the child's own sake as well as for the father's. As far as possible, she should help to establish an easy and happy relationship between the father and the children, and the father should make every effort to cooperate with her toward this end.

Bringing in the means of livelihood is not enough. The baby knows nothing about dollars and cents, and cares less. He understands only human contacts, and through them evaluates those about him. These early impressions color his whole life and his relationship with both father and mother.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Vomiting Disease.

Six or seven years ago John Zahorsky, of St. Louis, published a paper on what he called "winter vomiting disease." He stated that he had observed the symptom for more than 30 years and believed it should be regarded as a distinct affection.

The report in question calls to mind the Milwaukee epidemic of a few months ago and its recent description by R. M. Greenthal. A sizable proportion of the residents of that city suffered from a type of illness the chief characteristic of which was vomiting. Diarrhea was often an accompaniment, but in many constipation was the rule. Apparently the epidemic character of the infection was recognized by local physicians, as they had seen the same situation in previous years.

Similar outbreaks have been noted in other parts of the country in the spring and the autumn, although no season is exempt. The condition is probably an inflammation of the stomach or the intestine, or both, and those affected include individuals of all ages.

Relapses Frequent.

There is a sudden onset with repeated attacks of violent vomiting. This persists long after the stomach has been emptied and, as a result, only thick, stringy mucus, bile, and perhaps small amounts of blood are ejected. The illness continues for from two to five days. Recovery, which is rather prompt, is followed frequently by a relapse which may come as late as two weeks subsequent to the original seizure.

The milady does not answer to the general rules which apply to a food infection; that is, one traceable to milk, water, vegetables or fruits. In fact, in the Milwaukee cases there seemed to be no common dietary factor.

Many of the patients exhibited abdominal pain which was quite severe prior to the onset of vomiting. In some instances it continued for 24 hours or longer. The symptom presented a puzzling problem, as appendicitis can complicate almost any type of intestinal upset. Furthermore, the picture so closely resembled inflammation of the appendix that a careful study was demanded in each case. The white cells were usually increased, but not quite to as high a level as though the appendix were actively involved. Abdominal pain, however, was found in those who had had the structure removed.

On the whole, many of the victims were quite ill—at least for a short time. There was marked prostration, sunken eyes, and sometimes in children—because of the great loss of fluid—it was necessary to administer water (salt solution) under the skin or directly into a vein. The temperature at the outset was not high, although it occasionally reached 104 degrees Fahrenheit on the second day.

Inasmuch as recovery was the rule the plan of treatment adopted was merely one designed to meet the patient's demands for food and water. No remedial measures appeared to abate the vomiting. In fact, starvation for several hours proved the most salutary procedure. Heat applied to the abdomen was found to be comforting, since it aided in the relief of restlessness. As soon as the appetite returned the diet was resumed gradually and within two or three days was approximately normal.

For Her First School Days

Even the pre-kindergarten miss now goes to school emulating her elders in smart, hand-fashioned frocks, including style details sponsored by the prevailing fashion trends. The little girl above is wearing a rhumba red, two-piece frock, effectively hand-crocheted in contrasting stitches; the "button parade" is also hand-done. Numerous brilliant colors are available in yarns for juvenile clothes this season. They are not only alluring to the wee members of the family, but follow the trend for bright tones as a safety traffic measure. CAPITAL MANNERS

Too-Attentive Escort at Dance Presents Problem.

By Margaret Wallace.

A GIRL with a too-persistent suitor has as much of a problem as does the wallflower. What is a girl to do if she wants to be popular with all the young men at a dance and one man insists on shadowing her and keeping everyone else at bay?

The letter of a Washington girl who has this problem follows:

"How can I prevent a young man I go to dances with or to the home of a friend from monopolizing me all evening so that no one else can dance with me? We dance on a wide veranda and it is very informal. The young men "cut in" on the girls a lot. As soon as I dance with this young man, he dances me away from every man who wants to dance with me and is so disagreeable that I do not have a good time at all and the other men avoid asking me to dance."

If I dance with anyone else he "cuts in" right away and pulls me away and then gets angry if anybody attempts to "cut back." I always have a good time and lots of partners everywhere else when this young man is not around. I like him, but I am not engaged to him. I like to go to this place to dance, and as the young man is a relative he will always be there. Do you think I can ask him to stop embarrassing me without hurting his feelings, and making his relatives angry?

There is only one way to correct this situation, and that is a frank talk with the young man. If he persists in his rudeness, refuse to dance with him at all. Your other dance partners should be as clever as he is in evading his attempts to "cut in" and doubtless will make special endeavor if you explain the circumstances to them. Tell the young man you like to dance with him, but that you want to do as the other girls do and dance with other men present as well and that he should pay some attention to his hostess and the other girls.

Painted Patterns Rampant in Paris

Never before have figured patterns achieved such prominence in fall fabric collections, and never has paint been called on to do such yeoman service at any time of year.

The newly drafted paint buckets dripped gold and silver along with vivid colors over all sorts of yieldings stuffs. Scads of motifs were requisitioned. Polka dots got in some of the best work of their careers.

Rugh cloque grounds took to paint like ducks to waddling. Smooth lacquered satins were spattered with it. Velvets lay down under painted onslaughts of gold dots, green leaves and red berries. Heavy ottoman silks, tinsel gauzes, flowered satins and printed crepes, all gave ground to painted patterns.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 25.

THE PROBLEM of women drinking at bars, elbow to elbow with the men folks, is violently agitating the local citizenry at present. The latest blast against the practice comes not from dry forces nor from protesting males, but from the New York Federation of Liquor Dealers!

WHITNEY BOURNE.

"There is nothing more disgusting," says a proclamation from the liquor-sellers, "than to see a woman, especially one under the influence of liquor, standing at a bar." And who won't say "Amen!" to that?

Local women learned to drink at bars during speakeasy days—in fact, most of the "smart" speakeasies of the '20s were strictly designed to appeal to the feminine trade. When repeal came women here refused to give up the practice, and now it is a common sight—and how common!—to see more women than men at the cocktail bars between 4 and 6:30 every afternoon. Men literally loathe having women drinking beside them, and many refuse to patronize places that permit the practice. The Waldorf established a drinking room for such refugees, in which women are not allowed to set foot.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The Glamor Girl Brigade, now assembling in town after a summer of suntanning, is secretly sighing with relief at the report that the beautiful Whitney Bourne, one of their leading members and heaviest competition, may not come back from England this fall, where she has been appearing in a movie. Whitney seems to be going like a breeze in Lunnon, socially and professionally, and may decide to stay on and mop up in both fields.

IT'S LOVE when it sends you 7,000 miles to marry the boy of your choice! That's what's come over Gladys Willis, one of our home town girls, who is now on her way to Capetown, South Africa, to marry Warren Eckeiler, who represents an American radio concern down there at the tip of Africa.

Those who prophesied disaster when our social Marjorie (Bubbles) Oelrichs married Band Leader Eddie Duchin are now eating their hasty words without catsup, for the two are traveling around with Eddie's dance band and having a fine time for themselves. Lowly Plants of Herb Garden Source of Perfume

Queen Elizabeth Brewed Scent From Leaves of Own Culture.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

FEW WOMEN who visit the Cottage Herb Garden of All Hallows Guild, the Garden Guild of Washington Cathedral, in the Cathedral close realize how important a part these lowly plants have taken in preserving feminine charm and loveliness through the ages.

In the old days, both in England and colonial America, women were wise enough to make their own perfumes, sweet waters, washing balls, pomanders and sweet linen bags from the leaves and blossoms gathered in their own herb gardens.

When perfumes came into high favor in the days of Queen Elizabeth that astute monarch turned to her herb garden for her pet perfume, i. e., sweet woodruff. Its leaves were gathered by the queen and her maids in the dawn, carefully dried, under royal supervision, then placed in sandal wood boxes and later dispensed with a not too lavish hand to those who met with the Queen's pleasure.

The perfume of sweet woodruff is of an elusive, dainty variety which lingers about the leaves for several years, it is said. The sweet woodruff plant is used today at the Cottage Herb Garden in Washington Cathedral Close as an edging and its quaint five-star leaves make it admirable for this purpose. Its leaves made into a sweet bag with lavender and rose geranium leaves scent linens or lingerie in a manner that would please the great Queen herself.

A noted herbalist writes: "In the herb garden fragrance depends more on the leaves of plants than on the flowers. One secret is soon discovered. It is the value of leaf scents. Flower scents are evanescent, leaf odours are permanent."

Out of one's herb garden may be found the material with which to make this home-made sweet water which dates back to the seventeenth century.

Sweet Water.

"Take damask roses at discretion, basil, sweet marjoram, lavender, walnut leaves, of each two handfuls; rosemary, one handful; a little lemon balm, cloves, cinnamon, one ounce; bay leaf, rosemary tops, of each a few; pour upon these as much white wine as will conveniently wet them, and let them infuse 10 or 12 days, then distill it off."

Good Master John Middleton, writing a recipe book in 1734, set down these directions for a sweet scented bath, which can be prepared easily by the Washington housewife fortunate enough to possess an herb garden, small or large:

A Sweet Scented Bath.

"Take of sage, lavender flowers, rose flowers, of each two handfuls, a little salt; boil them in water and make a bath not too hot, in which bathe the body in a morning, or 2 hours before meat."

In Shakespeare's play, "The Tempest," he speaks of the cowslip and his praise reminds us that the cowslip was recommended as the basis of a toilet water by our grandmothers and great-grandmothers.

Parkinson says in this regard: "Of the juice or water from the flowers of cowslips divers gentlewomen know how to cleanse the skin, from spots or discolorings therein as also to take away the wrinkles thereof and cause the skin to become smooth and fair."

In a little book called "Household Uses for Herbs," published by the League of New Hampshire Arts and Crafts, is this simple recipe for potpourri. The modern Washington woman can make it and glorify the atmosphere of her boudoir or sitting room thereby.

The herb garden once was the center of social life as well as the fount of beauty. The old print shown above depicts a sixteenth century herb garden.

Sweet Water Formula Dates Back to the 17th Century.

"Gather later in the day, when perfectly dry, a peck of rose petals. Put them into a bowl and sprinkle with ¾ pound common salt. Let them remain three or four days, and if more petals are added put in a little more salt. A few other fragrant sprigs can be added, such as rose geranium, verbena, lavender, bergamot, rosemary and thyme, and a few tiny rosebuds and cornflower petals for color. Put in some orange peel stuck full of cloves or a little powdered clove and a few bits of stick cinnamon. Sprinkle salt over the top and moisten from the top with a little brandy. The mixture should be occasionally stirred, but kept in covered jars, and if care is taken it will remain fragrant for years. Remove cover and stir up and leave open when the scent is wanted in the room."

Make a refreshing pillow for the family invalid by sewing a small pad of dried everlasting flowers, scented with a big handful of potpourri, dried lavender and rose geranium leaves.

Use rinses of camomile flowers, the same from which Peter Rabbit concocted a tea, to soften the hair after a shampoo.

Dried southernwood or "Lad's Love" placed in a closet will not only keep moths away, but impart a pleasant scent to the garments.

Sprigs of rosemary in the bride's bouquet signify never failing happiness.

And it must be remembered that rose vinegar, a favorite lotion of colonial days, may still be made by pouring pure vinegar over a jar of dried rose petals. Clean linen wrung out in this refreshing liquid is given by some as a certain cure to aching heads.

Awards Made In Preserving Prize Contest

Peach and Cantaloupe Conserve Is Adjudged the Best Recipe.

THERE were many unusual and interesting recipes submitted last week in The Post's contest for preserved fruit. Peaches, pears, plums and grapes were the fruits mentioned the most frequently and therefore would be judged the most popular for preserving at this time of year. Cantaloupe, watermelon, citron, crab apples, and quince preserving recipes were not overlooked, however, when Post food page readers submitted their favorite preserving recipes last week.

Peach and Cantaloupe Conserve.

1 pint diced peaches
1 pint diced cantaloupe
2 lemons, juice and grated rind
3 cups sugar
2-3 cup English walnuts, chopped

Combine ingredients, with exception of nuts. Cook mixture until thick and clear, add nuts and pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Second prize of $3 is awarded Miss Marie E. Moran, 3416 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Her recipe follows:

Grandmother's Citron Preserves.

Choose just ripe citron so the meat will be firm. Pare citron, cut in one-half inch slices, then in fancy shapes. Allow:

6 pounds prepared citron
4½ cups granulated sugar
3 large seedless oranges
4 large lemons
½ pound ginger root or ¾ pound crystallized ginger
2 quarts cold water

Slice lemons and oranges in thin lacelike slices. Boil in the water until fruit looks clear. Have ginger root scraped and cut in pieces, boil 1 hour in water to cover. Bring water in which lemons and oranges were cooked and ginger water to a boil; add sugar, stir until dissolved. Let boil, skim, and when a clear sirup add citron, sliced oranges and lemons and ginger root. Cook until fruit is transparent. Put in hot sterilized jars. Cook sirup until thick, pour over fruit and seal. If crystallized ginger is used cut in slices and add to fruit when half done. These preserves are delicious when served with ice cream or as a cake filling mixed with plain white icing.

First of the three $1 prizes goes to Mrs E. J. Roth, Rockville. Her recipe follows:

Julia's Spiced Crab Apple Jelly.

½ peck crab apples
½ gallon vinegar (less if very strong)
1 quart water, or enough to cover quartered apples
Whole allspice
Stick cinnamon
Whole cloves
(Amount of each of last three purchased for 5 cents)

Cut up apples, add liquid and whole spices (loose). Cook apples until pulp is tender and drain through bag as for jelly. Measure and cook juice 20 minutes before adding the warmed sugar. Use 1 cup of sugar for each cup of juice. Cook until juice when tested forms jelly test.

The jelly is more delicate if made in small quantities and cooked as short a time as possible.

This is excellent when served with fowl or meat.

Golden Red Marmalade.

Cut the white part of one watermelon into strips and lay in water over night. Put into fresh water and boil until tender. Drain thoroughly and put through food chopper. Grind four oranges and two lemons and add to the rind with five pounds of sugar. Boil until clear and thick. Seal in clean jars and top with paraffin.

The last of the three $1 prizes goes to Miss Eugenia Ireland, 3810 Eastern avenue northeast. Her recipe follows:

Quince Ginger.

Pare and core six pounds ripe quinces. Cut in thin slices or small pieces. Boil two cups water and four pounds sugar for five minutes. Add quinces, one ounce green or dried ginger root and four lemons cut in paper-thin slices. Simmer about two hours or until the fruit is transparent, and a deep ruby color. Seal while hot.

Chief Appeal Of Rice Rests With Cooking

RICE can be served in so many attractive ways and is such a popular regional dish that it has been chosen as the theme of The Post's recipe contest for this week.

All Post food page readers are invited to enter the contest. Any recipe that bases its distinction upon the fact that one of its major ingredients is rice will be eligible for a prize.

Cash prizes will be awarded the five best recipes submitted. The first prize is $5, the second $3 and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

Naturally, half the appeal of rice depends upon the manner in which it is cooked, so be sure to give explicit directions for cooking the rice when you write out your recipe.

All recipes should be sent to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your entry in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

Successful French Frying Needs Exact Heat Control

The modern deep fat fryer is immaculate, non-dripping and easy to handle. The model illustrated above is equipped with a fine wire mesh basket that is controlled by a gadget that slides over the handle. The basket makes it easy to lower or remove food to be fried.

Too Hot or Too Cold Deep Fat Affects Both Taste and Digestibility; Proper Utensil Simplifies Kitchen Procedure.

By Dorothea Duncan.

MANY WOMEN LIMIT the variety of their menus by refusing to serve french fried foods because they consider them indigestible. This is only natural, for unless foods fried in deep fat are properly prepared they are not digestible, nor are they always attractive to the palate.

One common mistake in frying vegetables, meat or fish in deep fat is in having the fat too hot. Many persons do not have a thermometer and they do not bother with the old-fashioned reliable bread cube test, but feel that when the fat smokes it is hot enough for the frying to begin. This is the first and most serious error in deep fat frying technique. The fat should never be permitted to smoke, for when it does the fat is burning, and as soon as it begins to burn it decomposes into products that are neither pleasant to the taste nor easy to digest.

Fat that is too hot naturally permits a thick, unattractive crust to form about the food frying, while the interior of the food, cut off from the heat, remains uncooked. But there are equal difficulties when the fat is not hot enough. In this case no crust will form about the object being fried with the result that the fat has an opportunity to soak into the center of the food. This second product is as unattractive as the first for it is soggy, unpalatable and not easy to digest.

Proper Utensil Important.

The proper type of pan for deep-fat frying is another factor in acquiring and keeping the right temperature for the food to be fried. The pan should be heavier than the usual saucepan so that the grease will not heat too rapidly and burn.

Naturally, a deep-fat thermometer will always give you an accurate test for the temperature of the fat, but the old-fashioned bread cube test can be relied upon if you have no thermometer. The fat is just the right temperature for large pieces of raw food—breaded chops, for example—when a 1-inch cube of bread taken from the soft part of the loaf will brown in 1 to 1¼ minutes. The temperature of the fat at this test is 350-375 degrees F. The fat is the right temperature for smaller pieces of raw food or raw batters and doughs (360-390 degrees F.) if the piece of bread will brown in 50 to 60 seconds. The fat is the right temperature for most cooked foods—croquettes, fish balls, etc. (375-390 degrees F.), if the bread will brown in from 40 to 50 seconds.

Vegetable Oils Popular.

Vegetable fats and oils are popular for deep-fat frying because they will not burn easily and they can be used over and over, as they absorb practically no odor from the food. They are perhaps the best fats for general deep-fat frying.

Olive oil and lard are also used, but they both have a lower burning temperature than the vegetable fats and oils. Olive oil is not a general favorite because of its pronounced flavor. Lard is a good frying medium but it must be skimmed carefully after each frying, and cannot be used as generally as the vegetable fats or oils because like all animal fats, it absorbs strong odors from foods.

For successful deep-fat frying be sure that there is enough fat in the pan to submerge to a depth of 1 to 2 inches the object to be fried. The kettle should be filled about three-quarters full—no more—of fat. If the kettle is any fuller, the fat may bubble and boil over and catch fire.

The fat should be heated slowly to the desired temperature. The desired temperature will be kept fairly constant if only small amounts of the food to be fried are lowered into the fat at one time. Too large amounts of food may make the fat bubble over and will certainly reduce the heat of the fat to a point too low for successful frying.

After the food has gained the proper shade of brown it should be removed at once from the fat, drained on absorbent paper and removed to a warming oven unless it can be served immediately.

Fat that has been used for foods without a strong flavor can be used again and again. The fat should be cooled until it is safe to handle, and then clarified by straining through several thicknesses of cheesecloth placed in a strainer. The fat should be kept in a cool place so that it will remain sweet.

STEAMED PEACH DUDDING.

3 cups peaches
2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup milk

To be successful with this kind of pudding, the cook must see that the water is boiling violently when the pudding is placed over it and must not allow it to fall below the boiling point at any time while the pudding is cooking.

Sift the salt, flour and baking powder together, rub in the shortening and add the milk. The result will be a dough too soft to roll out. Peel and stone the peaches and cut them into rather thick slices. Place the sliced fruit in a greased pudding dish, spread the dough over the fruit and set the dish in a steamer over a kettle of rapidly boiling water, covering the steamer tightly. Steam for one hour. Turn the pudding out without breaking. This brings the peaches uppermost when the pudding is sent to the table. Serve with hard sauce or with any liquid sauce.

Chopped Ripe Olives As Tomato Stuffing

Chopped ripe olives added to seasoned cottage cheese makes a delicious filling for hollowed fresh tomatoes. They may be added also to cream cheese that is to be used for stuffing green peppers for salad slicing. Ripe olive rings also enhance the appearance and flavor of a salad composed of avocado slices and crisp greens.

The small sized fruit which is less expensive than the large fruit may be used for slicing. It is possible also to buy small cans of ready prepared chopped, sliced or crushed ripe olives.

Mint Pineapple.

The following recipe provides a healthful and delicious beverage for the children's party. To one cup canned, unsweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice add four tablespoons sugar and a dozen fresh mint leaves chopped fine. Boil five minutes. Strain through a fine sieve and add a full cup of the pineapple juice and one and one-half cups carbonated water. Shake well and serve ice-cold with a fresh mint leaf in each glass.

GUARANTEED RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Common constipation is usually due to meals low in "bulk." Pills and drugs give only temporary relief. The sensible thing to do is to put "bulk" back into your meals.

Millions of people get this needed "bulk" in a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Its "bulk" is much like that in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system.

Some years ago, an investigation was made among thousands of ALL-BRAN users. 98 per cent found it satisfactory. Only 2 per cent had the type of constipation that would not respond to ALL-BRAN.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as cereal or in cooked dishes. ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Oxford Group's Praise of Hitler Irks Methodists

'God-Controlled FascistDictatorship' No Solution, Says Church Paper.

By the United Press.

Boston, Sept. 1.—The Zion's Herald, oldest weekly in American Methodism, tomorrow will take issue editorially with Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman's assertion that "a God-controlled fascist dictatorship" could solve human problems.

Dr. Buchman, leader of the Oxford Group Movement, was quoted in an interview as saying:

"I thank heaven for a man like Adolf Hitler, who built a front line of defense against the anti-Christ of communism . . . but think what it would mean to the world if Hitler surrendered to the control of God. Or Mussolini, or any dictator. Through such a man God could control a nation overnight and solve every last bewildering problem."

"In Dr. Buchman's interview," the Herald says, "there is too much Old Testament and not enough New Testament, too much Sinai and not enough Sermon on the Mount," the Herald comments.

"The Almighty is no such hurry as the Oxford Group's leader. Neither is it in the nature of the Christ-like God to transgress man's freedom, even for the sake of ruling a world after the fashion of Hitler or a Mussolini. Dictatorship would fade away at the touch of Christ, whose whole method was teaching and persuasion.

"'God-controlled fascism!' The terms are mutually exclusive. As well talk of a God-controlled hell! When God controls, fascism is ruled out. Does Dr. Buchman, while he is thanking the Almight for Hitler's resistance to communism, ever stop ot think that in many respects fascism is more menacing to the welfare of the world than is even Russian bolshevism?"

The Zion's Herald, founded 114 years ago, is independent in policy and circulates in all 48 States and several foreign countries.

Wife's Dog Target Of Gun Fusillade

Police arrived at 1305 Tenth street northwest last night to answer a shooting call. They found James Wiley, 50, his head badly cut; Patrick J. Dailey, 22, unijured, but irate, and one small black dog, badly frightened.

Wiley, it seems, was left alone last night with his wife's dog. He and the dog never got along very well, anyway, it was said, but apparently the had a serious dispute last night. At any rate, neighbors heard shots from his revolver and saw him chase the animal out of the building, frequently firing.

Dailey, another resident of the building, was in the line of fire and narrowly escaped being struck. To protect himself, he launched a vicious football tackle which brought the gun-toting Wiley to earth. Wiley, after treatment at Emergency Hospital, was taken to Gallinger for observation.

Teagle, U. S. Argue Taxation of Kennel

Special Dispatch to The Post.

The Government and Walter C. Teagle, Standard Oil Co. executive, are in dispute over whether his operation of a bird dog kennel is a business or a hobby.

Teagle asked the board of tax appeals for redetermination of a $4,310 income tax deficiency for 1933, claiming a deduction of $6,825 from his report as a loss on the kennels. It was disallowed by the Treasury, which said raising bird dogs appeared to be a hobby, rather than a business.

Teagle reported that if it were a hobby, then it was fair to assume the Government would not require him to report any future profits. He said his dogs had taken first places in field trial events from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Drukman Case Blocking Is Charged to Geoghan

Albany, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—New York City Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine told Gov. Herbert H. Lehman today he did "everything but assault" District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, of Brooklyn, in an effort to have the celebrated Drukman murder case resubmitted to a grand jury.

Testifying at Geoghan's removal hearing before the Governor, Valentine bitterly criticized the district attorney, his friend of 25 years, who earlier denied the commissioner had ever made the request.

court of Circuit Judge Joseph A. Moynihan here, after all the prospective jurors had sworn that they were not members or former members of the Black Legion.

Immediately after the grand jury report was issued, Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald announced in Lansing that he would recommend that all State employes shown to be members of the Black Legion be discharged. His statement was followed by an announcement from Chairman John S. McDonald, of the State Liquor Control Commission, that Gordon C. MacDougall, branch manager in Pontiac, who was named in the report, would be dismissed.

The report said "no evidence of criminality exists at the present time which * * * will substantiate a criminal charge against these men," but said it had been decided to publish the names of former members in the belief "that the light of publicity * * * will effectively dispel enthusiasm for similar organizations, just as secrecy, darkness and ignorance further these sinister purposes."

Among the members or former members listed were Joseph A. Long, a State Representative; David C. Pence, prosecuting attorney; George C. Johnston, city treasurer of Pontiac; Charles McMillan, chief of police; Burton P. Daugherty, member of the Pontiac police and fire trial board, and numerous county and State employes.

The grand jury report declared that it found no evidence "that the Black Legion is an organization of Fascist character" or that foreign money was used to finance it "as the possible contribution from a dictating or sympathetic foreign nation."

U. S. Borrowing Policy Awaited In Wall Street

Financiers Believe Heavy Cash Reserves Will Be Used by Treasury.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—Revised Federal budget estimates for the current fiscal year, pointing to a relatively moderate further rise in the national debt, aroused conjectures in financial quarters tonight whether they hinted a decrease in Treasury borrowing.

After the record peace-time financial operations of the Government in raising funds for payment of the soldiers' bonus and relief needs in the last half of the previous fiscal year, Wall Street has awaited with keen interest the Treasury's plans for its September quarterly financing.

With the new budget estimates made late today by President Roosevelt figuring a sharp reduction in the Treasury's cash balances and a net increase of $410,000,000 in the gross public debt for the fiscal year ending next June, some bond experts looked for an interruption this month in the procession of big Federal issues to replenish Uncle Sam's cash box.

They reasoned, in light of the latest budget figures, that the Treasury could fall back upon its heavy cash reserves to carry it through at least until the December financing date comes along.

After cashing around $1,200,000,000 in veterans' bonus bonds, the Treasury reported its 'working" cash balance on August 28 remained above $1,400,000,000, bond men pointed out.

That sum it was noted, is far above what the Government ordinarily carries in cash reserves, although its "working" balance the last few years has been kept at high figures.

With bonus cash demands dwindling and revenue estimates raised somewhat together with substantial repayments by Federal credit agencies, it appeared to some that the Government could cut its borrowing appreciably by drawing upon big deposits built up to its credit in banks from proceeds of the hugh offerings to the money market last December, March and June.

The Goverment bond market has been anticipating announcement of the Treasury September financing plans next week and opinion has been slightly divided whether it would be restricted to refunding a maturing issue of $514,000,000 in notes or would seek additional cash. There has been some talk of repayment of the notes out of cash reserves, but this idea was not well received in informed quarters.

Government borrowing has been of paramount interest to the financial district the past few years because Treasury operations during the dearth of private financing has dominated the securities markets.

The upward revision of revenue estimates was held to have been expected in view of the sustained recovery of business in the spring and summer.

Business Failures.

New York, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Business failures in the United States numbered 138 in the week ended August 27, compared with 135 in the preceding week and 201 in the same period a year ago, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

Rudy Vallee 'Sorry' He Struck Dancer

Toronto, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Rudy Vallee, crooning orchestra leader, told Inspector Robert Alexander, of the Toronto police, today, he was "very sorry" for the incident in which he was credited with a one-punch knockdown of an inappreciative dancer.

About 1,000 persons were dancing early today in the Canadian national exhibition ballroom when the incident occurred, but no two blow-by-blow accounts of the encounter tallied.

An empty bottle, reports said, hurtled close to the orchestra platform, Vallee jumped down and landed once on the man who was pointed out to him as the bottle thrower. It was a left to the jaw, a right to the jaw or a shove, depending on the version.

"He said he was aroused by the bottle-throwing," the inspector said, "and is sorry for everything that happened. It was just a little misunderstanding."

Friend of Leopold Dropped at Joliet

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Dismissal of Dr. Ferris F. Laune, penologist who developed a new parole prediction system with the aid of convict Nathan Leopold, was announced today.

State Welfare Director A. L. Bowen said Laune was dropped on July 15 as parole actuary at the Illinois State penitentiaries at Joliet.

Announcement of the action came a few weeks after Leopold, notorious "thrill killer" of Bobby Franks, publicly defended the system against criticism from a United States Justice Department parole officer.

Bowen denied, however, that publication of Leopold's articles had anything to do with the case.

Laune was dismissed, Bowen said, because of "discipline violations."

Marland Won't Pardon Clevelander, Ex-Convict

Oklahoma City, Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Gov. E. W. Marland said today he would not grant a pardon to Carlton B. Chilton, whose extradition to Oklahome to complete a two-year bank burglary sentence was refused yesterday by Gov. Martin L. Davey, of Ohio.

Marland said if Chilton goes to any other State attempts would be made to return him to Granite Reformatory, from which he fled 23 years ago. He since has become a respected Cleveland citizen.

The Governor said he did not consider the man himself important in the case, but the situation was important because of the subject of discipline.

Virginia Urged To Stage a Fair At Jamestown

Engage Fan Dancer to Play Part of Pocahontas, Says Carveth Wells.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 1.—Carveth Wells, author and radio commentator, today suggested that Virginia hold an exposition at Jamestown comparable with the Texas Centennial, and engage a fan dancer to play the part of Pocahontas, who "tumblessaulted naked at the age of 12 in the Jamestown market place."

The proposal was advanced at a luncheon given by the State conservation and development commission in his honor, and attended by city and State officials.

Many visitors to Williamsburg are disappointed because the restored colonial capital looks "so new," Wells said. Disavowing any intention to critize, he said that if Hollywood designers had done the job they would have sandblasted the brick walls to give them the appearance of age. He hinted it wasn't too late to do it anyway.

Virginia has a wonderful history, the speaker said, and Virginians know less about it than anybody else.

"Virginians are conservative," he opined.

The visitor confided that although he was born in Bermuda and came to America from England, he was a direct descendant of the first Governor Connecticut had after the British Colonial Governor was ousted by the revolution.

The colony at Jamestown suffered the "starving time" because it tried to live according to a communistic philosophy, he declared, and cited what he said was the authentic history of one "fat jovial" citizens, who was discovered to have salted down his wife and was having her for meals three times a day.

Gorman at Helm Of Virginia PWA

Richmond, Va., Sept. 1 (A.P.).—Sheridan P. Gorman took up his work today as acting director of PWA for Virginia with the pledge to continue the policies of Col. James A. Anderson, who resigned to resume his work as a professor at V. M. I.

Gorman formerly was chief finance examiner for Virginia and recently has been in Washington doing the same work for the States of Virginia, Maryland and Delaware. Col. Annderson said he was informed Gorman would be acting director until a permanent director was named.

Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd have recommended both Austin Brockenbrough, assistant to Col. Anderson, and Edley Craighill, vice mayor of Lynchburg, to the PWA to fill the position as director.

* X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1936 17

Street Urges Aid for 10,000 Denied Relief

Director Calls Upon City to Ask $1,000,000 of U. S. for Task.

3,000 Families Barred From Grants or WPA Rolls, He Says.

Washingtonians last night were urged by Elwood Street, director of public relief, to go before Congress next January and to demand an appropriation of $1,000,000 to take care of 3,000 destitute families now barred both from WPA and direct relief rolls.

Speaking over Station WOL Street said "there are about as many destitute, unemployed persons in Washington right now as there were in the height of our relief activity a year ago, when we were spending for relief approximately $10,000,000 a year of Federal and District funds—mostly Federal funds."

After estimating that there are now 3,000 families in Washington with one or more members employable but unable to get a job either in private industry or on WPA projects, he said:

"It looks to me as if the citizens of Washington ought to demand of the Congress of the United States that it make a supplementary appropriation to meet this need as soon as possible after Congress meets in January.

"Until that is done, very serious suffering is going to continue and increase. Our community will suffer more and more the results of ill health and low morale; of the menace of disease, of delinquency and of a discouraged citizenry."

"10,000 in Need."

Street estimated the cost of providing even a bare subsistence for these 3,000 cases, which represent 10,000 persons, is $1,000,000.

"The need is here," he said. "I know it is hard to believe because those who are in need suffer in silence, bewildered and discouraged by the lack of resources and yet hopeful that the citizens of Washington and the Congress of the United States will take appropriate action."

The public welfare director complained of the inadequacy of the $1,600,000 appropriated for unemployment relief by the last Congress and cited the Blanton limitation to $200,000 for administrative expenses as a further handicap. For the next fiscal year he has asked $2,300,000, or an increase of $700,000.

Street pointed out residents of the States come here and absorb practically all available Government jobs.

"There is a boom here all right," he admitted, "but it is bringing people from all over the United States. It is not employing local people."

Ex-PWA Worker Attempts Suicide By Inhaling Fumes

Everett G. Brundage, 28, a psychologist, who until recently was in charge of a PWA project in the Middle West under the Public Health Service, was found unconscious under his car parked just off the Rockville pike near Garrett Park, Md., last night by James R. Miller, a Maryland State policeman.

The policeman said that Brundage had wrapped an overcoat around his head into which fumes from the exhaust pipe of his car were pouring.

Earlier in the day, Brundage's wife, Mrs. Geraldine B. Brundage, had reported to Washington police that her husband was missing from home and that she thought he might try to commit suicide. The Brundages live at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Policeman Miller said he was patroling the road when he observed a parked car, the motor of which was running, but which apparently had no occupant. He stopped, looked around and discovered Brundage unconscious underneath. He took the man to the office of Dr. C. E. Hawks, at Rockville, where he was revived and later taken to the Rockville Jail.

Miller said that Brundage told him that both he and his wife recently had lost their jobs.

Surrender in Shooting Case

Clarence L. Ware (left) and John W. Sweeney, reputed members of the Warring liquor and numbers gang, photographed at police headquarters last night after they surrendered to police.

O'Brien Suspects Surrender

Gamblers and other racketeers, their patrons frightened and their income dented, began passing around word that unless Ware, Sweeney and Tate surrendered, the two would be sorry. In other words, the "heat was turnd on."

Tate also is expected to surrender.

Four persons already have been charged with assault with intent to kill in connection with the shooting of O'Brien on July 21. They are Charles (Rags) Warring, a "Foggy Bottom" police character, said to be one of the leaders of the Warring liquor and numbers mob; George (Teddy) Tear, brother of Richard Tear, fiance of the murdered Corinna Loring; Joseph S. Bond and Samuel (Monty) Montgomery.

Warring is free on $20,000 bond. The others were released in $10,000 bond each. Tear was arrested again last week on a liquor charge and again released on bond.

Ware and Sweeney were taken from the Third Precinct last night to the detective bureau, and from there to Providence Hospital, where the wounded O'Brien was asked to identify them.

The surrender of the two men followed a day of excitement and "graft" rumors in the Police Department.

Aroused by talk of a "tie-up" between the Warring gang and members of his force, Maj. Brown called in Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of the Detective Bureau, and ordered a complete report on "any possible tie-up" between police and racketeers.

Lieut. Cox said last night that he would continue his raiding activities, hoping to smash the Warring gang and all other racket groups.

1938 Estimates Hearing Here Slated Sept. 10

Question of New Taxes vs. Improvements Is Before Civic, Trade Units.

The District Commissioners yesterday scheduled the promised public hearing on the 1938 departmental estimates to begin September 10 at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building.

Invitations will be sent to all major civic and trade organizations, including the Federation of Citizens Association, the Washington Board of Trade, the Washington Taxpayers Association, and all the neighborhood citizens' groups.

Faced with the problem of adjusting departmental requests now amounting to $58,027,433 to an anticipated income of about $40,000,000, the Commissioners wish to be advised as to whether Washington taxpayers prefer to pay new taxes or to do without admittedly worthy capital improvements and health and welfare aids.

Commissioner George E. Allen pointed out that even a more generous Federal contribution than the $5,000,000 appropriated for the current year would not solve the District's fiscal problem.

It now appears that, with only a $5,000,000 lump sum payment, the District's revenue in the fiscal year 1938 will be more than $18,000,000 under the budget estimates.

A special District committee is now engaged in studying possible new taxes to increase municipal income, but it is doubtful whether any new tax program will be adopted by the Commissioners until President Roosevelt makes the recommendation of the fiscal relations committee to Congress regarding the Federal lump sum payment.

Gen. Learnerd returned yesterday from a vacation and found the house ransacked. Included in the loot was $12 in pennies.

Playgrounds' Head Defends View on WPA

Aid Is Substituted for Regular Funds, Miss Baker Asserts.

Answers Allen's Demand for Explanation of Her Criticism.

Sibyl Baker, director of playgrounds, yesterday defended her criticism of the Works Progress Administration in relation to the playground department following receipt of a letter from Commissioner George E. Allen, District WPA administrator, demanding an explanation.

Insisting she was trying merely to show the need for more adequate appropriations for her department when she hit the WPA work in her 1938 estimates, Miss Baker complained that WPA aid was being substituted for a regular appropriation. She also cited incomplete WPA projects at the New York avenue and McMillan playgrounds.

The playground department, she said, received no funds for improvements in the 1937 act on account of the WPA projects and only about $40,000 for maintenance, which represents one cent for every child in an average year's attendance.

The schools, on the other hand, she pointed out, received $1,500,000 for improvements of buildings and grounds.

"If I had a regular appropriation and could then use WPA laborers as supplementary aid, I would not complain," she said.

Allen sent his letter to Miss Baker after noting her criticism of WPA in the department's budget estimates.

After quoting from Miss Baker's statement, the Commissioner said:

"In view of the fact that the playground department has been using relief labor for the past five years, and also as the WPA provides a method under its regulations, form 403, to rectify any condition such as you state, I am indeed surprised at your statement.

"There are many departments in the District and Federal Government which have approved WPA projects. These departments are most anxious to receive WPA labor. I will appreciate it, therefore, if you will furnish me immediately with a list of WPA personnel who are causing you embarrassment, so that steps may be taken to remove them from the playground department."

Henson, Peary Aid, Is Retired by U. S.

Matthew A. Henson, native colored Washingtonian who accompanied Commander Peary on all of his Arctic explorations, including that on which the pole was discovered, began retirement from the customs service yesterday with felicitations from friends here and throughout the country.

He was awarded the Congressional medal of honor recently.

As the sole American witness of Peary's successful achievement in discovery of the pole, Henson became involved in the controversy surrounding claims of prior discovery by Dr. Frederick Cook.

President Taft, at the close of his Administration, appointed him a clerk in the correspondence section of the United States Customs Office in New York, where he has been employed until his retirement yesterday.

Roosevelt to Attend Annual Cup Races

President Roosevelt announced yesterday he would attend the tenth annual President's Cup Regatta, which will be held here September 24-27.

In making known his plans the President expressed keen interest in the affairs of the regatta to John A. Remon, president of the association, and Harry P. Somerville, executive secretary.

The two officers of the association personally presented Mr. Roosevelt with an invitation on behalf of the regatta, the American Power Boat Association and the racing drivers.

WPA Music Director Envisions Emancipation Of Artist From Canned Music and Hard Times

Sokoloff Sees Dawn of a Musically Cultured American Public.

Nikolai Sokoloff, WPA music project director, who has been keeping his ears to the music of hundreds of jobless musicians throughout the country, pointed yesterday to a new day for the artist who took the knocks from canned music and hard times.

A musically cultured America is going to demand the services of these men and women. Instead of begging for a job, they will be drafted into the work of producing concerts and operas, he declared.

Sokoloff, who tonight will lead the Summer Concerts Orchestra in another program at the Watergate, said the recipe for this new situation was simple.

Not that America is going 100 per cent music minded, he hastened to add.

"Consider that in the past about 3 per cent of the people in our country supported music—concerts, or opera," he pointed out. "Now, if only 5 per cent more become interested to the extent that they demand good music, think what can be accomplished. Think of all the music that could be produced."

That's the way Sokoloff looks at the prospects, and he believes the extra 5 per cent is rapidly being realized. He has been traveling about in the last year, attending, with millions of other music lovers, the concerts made possible by the project he heads. The results, he said, are amazing.

Twenty million people, most of whom didn't—perhaps couldn't—go to concerts before, have attended WPA concerts in the last year. Nearly 5,000,000 attended them last July alone.

When you make music for that many persons, who attend concerts "because they love the stuff" (certainly not for social reasons) you are serving the public—providing the music is good, in Sokoloff's opinion.

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF.

Sokoloff said there were two questions to be answered when considering music's progress. Are the musicians being helped? Are they serving the community so that it will become musically conscious?

As head of the WPA project, he is convinced he can answer in the affirmative.

He said the musicians were being helped, not only by the employment offered, but by the opportunity to play, to sing and to compose. The works of 622 American composers have been given a total of 1,800 performances through WPA music groups in the last year.

"I didn't know there were that many in all the land," the director commented. "Now, they're not all good. Of course not. If, after two years, we discover as many as 50 worth-while compositions, I would say we have done marvelously well.

"But that is not the important thing. No composer knows if the stuff he writes is good or bad until he hears it. He has no idea at all what the notes he writes down actually sound like until an orchestra (if it is an orchestra piece) plays them. And how many composers in America have had access to an orchestra? Very few, of course, and yet we bemoan the lack of American music."

Sokoloff will conduct one work brought to his attention at one of his concerts at the Watergate. (He'll have charge of the programs Friday and Sunday nights, as well as tonight.) The composition is by Heinz Roemheld, who formerly lived in Washington. It is a minuet from an instrumental suite.

It would be absurd, the conductor-director said, to talk about letting the State subsidize music—until the people want music one way or another.

"Our job," he said, "is to get the public interested in music. When that is done then they will decide how they will support it. Maybe they will want to do it by taxation.

Sokoloff was music director and conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra for 15 years, and later founded and directed the New York State Orchestra. He has been guest conductor of such orchestras as the London Symphony, the Academy Orchestra of Russia, and the Cincinnati, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco and Philadelphia Symphony Orchestras and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

While in the West recently he conducted a series of concerts with the Portland (Oreg.), Philharmonic Orchestra.

Two Assistant D. C. Counsels Assume Duties

Mahorner and Simmon Are Sworn in as Aids to Elwood Seal.

Two new assistant corporation counsel, Matthias Mahorner, jr., and F. Glenn Simmon, were sworn in yesterday afternoon, following their appointment by the District Commissioners upon recommendation of Elwood Seal, corporation counsel.

Simultaneous with their appointment two aids who had been engaged on only a temporary basis resigned, as expected, because no money was available for their continuance. They are Leo B. Fee, protege of Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, and William Hogan.

Fee was engaged by E. Barrett Prettyman, when corporation counsel, as legislative aid, but Representative Thomas L. Blanton blocked an appropriation in the 1937 act for his retention. Hogan was assigned to the Police Court staff.

Admittedly political patronage appointees, Mahorner and Simmon fill two vacancies that have existed for several months. The former, a son-in-law of Daniel J. Callahan, member of the District Unemployment Compensation Board, will be paid $3,800 a year, while Simmon, who was indorsed by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, will get $2,600.

James W. Lauderdale, who has been assigned to Police Court, was advanced from $2,600 to $3,200 a year and given an office in the District Building.

The Commissioners disclosed a letter written by Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, denying any knowledge of a letter from Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Washington Consumers Council, protesting against Mahorner's appointment because he had represented a chain store against a short weight charge filed by the District.

Lodge, who is a member of the council, explained that he neither advocated nor opposed Mahorner's appointment.

Navy Will Launch U. S. S. Enterprise

The aircraft carrier Enterprise will be launched at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. plant at 12:30 p. m. Saturday, Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, announced yesterday.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, has been designated by President Roosevelt to Christen the vessel.

The sister ship of the Enterprise, the U. S. S. Yorktown, was christened by Mrs. Roosevelt April 14, 1936.

Both carriers, each of 20,000 tons displacement, were authorized by Congress on June 16, 1935. The keel of the Enterprise was laid on July 16, 1934. On August 1, she was 78 per cent complete. The builders report the vessel will be completed about July 1, 1937.

U. S. Building Improvement Plans Drawn

$1,150,000 Park Service Program Announced by Director's Aid.

High-Speed Elevators Slated at Veterans Administration.

Charles A. Peters, jr., assistant director of the National Park Service, announced yesterday plans are under way for a $1,150,000 program of improvement in public buildings under Park Service jurisdiction.

Bids are already in on some of the projects, he said. On others, specifications are now being drawn up and bids will be advertised within the next 30 days. Money for the improvements already has been appropriated by Congress.

One of the largest single projects will be installation of new high-speed elevators in the Veterans Administratrion Building. To avoid crippling the present system, all the new lifts will not be put in at one time. Installation may take from a year to a year and a half.

Wiring System Change.

Changes also will be necessary in the wiring system, since the new elevators operate on alternating current while the building now uses direct current.

New elevators for the Farm Credit Administration building at 1300 E street northwest are also under consideration. Two new elevators are planned for the old Land Office Building, three in the old Patent Office and two in the old Pension Office Building.

Electric current in these three buildings will be changed from direct to alternating.

New Converter Planned.

Bids are now in for installation of a rotary converter to change current in the Navy and Munitions buildings from alternating to direct. Such a change, it is said, would reduce the present overloaded condition of the electrical system.

The antiquated wiring in the Washington Monument will be modernized. In addition, an emergency lighting system is planned for the shaft to insure its being lighted at all times.

The old Ford Theater, which houses the Lincoln Museum, and the old Postoffice Building also will be rewired. Improvements will be made in the watchmen's and fire alarm systems in the old Land, Patent and Pension office buildings, the old Postoffice, the State Department and the Farm Credit Administration structures.

6,000 See Gallagher Beat Levinsky in Bruising 10-Round Battle

Irishman Staves Off Rally After Leading; Decision Unanimous

By Bill McCormick.

Marty Gallagher, the big bruiser from Washington's Foggy Bottom district, outbruised King Levinsky, the big bruiser from Chicago's fish markets, in a rough 10-round barroom brawl at Griffith Stadium last night.

The decision in favor of the local lad was unanimous, but like a similar decision given him over Levinsky last October dubiously accepted in some quarters.

A majority of the 6,000 customers who contributed $7,530.86 to the box office thought Gallagher was entitled to the decision. Opinion in the press row was about evenly divided. The Post score sheet had Gallagher ahead 46 points to 43½ points at the finish.

The brawl—and it was just that—was marked by an almost complete disregard of the rules on both sides in almost every round. Levinsky was penalized one round—the ninth—which he apparently had lost anyway, for thumbing. Several of the rounds were scored even by Referee Charley Reynolds because both fighters were adjudged guilty of fouling.

Gallagher Starts Fast.

Gallagher started fast, roughing Levinsky from almost the opening bell to take the first three rounds by fairly decisive margins. The eventual winner seemed to weaken in the fourth and fifth rounds, which he lost, but he bounced back into the lead in the sixth and managed to hold the King even in the seventh.

The eighth round went to Levinsky as he staged a vicious rally to even matters up to that point, but Gallagher ripped loose with the most vicious, snarling attack he ever has unleashed to win the final two rounds and the unanimous vote of the officials.

As is his wont, Gallagher concentrated most of his fire on Levinsky's midriff until the King suddenly discovered that he could tie Marty up at close quarters. Then Marty found, also much to his surprise, that he could reach the King's noggin with a left hook, which set him up for right crosses. With the aid of that discovery, Marty was able to jog along to a rousing finish which gave the customers much entertainment, even if it didn't win the fight for Gallagher in the opinion of some.

Levinsky Flustered.

Levinsky seemed badly flustered when Gallagher tore into him with those vicious, ripping two-fisted attacks which characterized his plan of battle. He was staggered more than once by stiff, straight right hands to the head and on one or two occasions he was made pretty wobbly by sizzling left hooks which seemed to pack more authority than is their custom.

The King scored repeatedly at long range with rights to the head which made Marty blink, shake his head and even at times slightly wobbly-legged. These right-hand punches were delivered from almost any angle, finding their mark—when they did—from uppercuts, overhands or from somewhere around third base.

Although neither fighter went to the floor, Gallagher seemed on the verge of sitting down several times

Contract Signed By Owens for One Year

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—Jesse Owens came to New York today and signed a one-year contract making Marty Forkins, theatrical agent, his manager.

The brown-skinned Olympic hero signed his name to a paper which undoubtedly terminated his amateur career. The first clause in the contract reads: "I hereby employ you as my sole and exclusive manager, business and personal representative and adviser, with full power and authority to negotiate and enter into contracts for me."

Forkins, manager of Bill Robinson, famed tap-dancer and friend of Owens, has the authority to enter into contracts which will make Owens a professional.

Will Probably Turn Pro.

"It looks now like Owens will turn professional," said Forkins. "I have a deal on now, the exact nature of which I can't divulge, which is likely to materialize within 24 or 48 hours. It will present Owens as an added feature to an outdoor attraction."

Forkins indicated that Owens will make his first appearance in whatever he does in mid-September. If the plan Forkins is working on now fails to materialize, Owens will go on the stage. He has an offer of a ten weeks' contract at $5,000 a week. If he takes this offer he will sing, dance and lead an orchestra.

Owens himself really doesn't know what he's going to do, but he doesn't care as long as he can make some money. Sitting in a corner of an upstairs office at Jack Dempsey's restaurant, Owens said:

Will Do Anything.

"I have to get some sheckels. That's the main thing. I really do not know what the heck it's all about, but I'm willing to do anything. All I can tell you about my plans for sure is that I intend to smother a load of biscuits and chicken tonight at Bill Robinson's house, and then take a few tap-dancing lessons."

Asked if he wanted to retain his amateur standing, Owens replied:

"This is the first chance in my life I've had to make any money. I'm willing to do anything they want me to. If that means I have to give up my amateur standing, why I'll just have to do it."

Owens, born on a farm 14 miles from Decatur, Ala., September 12, 1913, has had many jobs during his brief career—cotton picker on an Alabama farm, shoe shine boy for ten years, newsboy, gasoline station attendant and page boy in the Ohio State Legislature—but he has never been able to make more than enough to support and educate himself.

Joe Louis' Fouls Held Deliberate

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—Joe Louis fouled him deliberately, Max Schmeling charged in an article in the Saturday Evening Post, published today, and, rather than risk being knocked out by a low blow the German went after Louis and knocked him out.

Schmeling, as told to Paul Gallico, said he had been bothered by low blows for several rounds and that it was not until the twelfth that he realized Louis was fouling intentionally.

Then, Max said, he decided to gamble and succeeded in knocking out Louis.

"He drops his left shoulder," Schmeling says in describing the twelfth round, "and comes in to me with a left hook that is so low that I make no more mistakes about it • • • Now it is at last clear in my mind • • • that is deliberate.

"Joe Louis is a good boy, and claen, but he does what he is told in his corner. Louis can still save himself and win because of the strange rules under which we fight in New York."

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Joe Louis "was out of his head at the time" he struck Max Schmeling a low blow in their fight last June, Roxborough, co-manager of the Negro heavyweight, said today.

DeShong to Oppose Detroit Club Today

Detroit's back-sliding Tigers, holding third place by a one-game margin over the Nats, will provide the opposition at Griffith Stadium today and tomorrow.

Rookies Help Nats Defeat Browns, 5-3

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Reinforcements rushed from Chattanooga led the Nats' advance along the American League front yesterday when they repulsed the battle-weary Browns and hunched into the first division.

With the big bat of Freddie Sington exploding a pair of vicious singles into the outfield and Johnny Mihalic laying down a barrage of three hits, the Nats blasted Elon Hogsett from the box in seven innings and collected a 5-3 victory.

Of course there was the small item of some six-hit pitching by Earl Whitehill and a breath-taking dash from second base to the plate by Ben Chapman on a bunt, but in the main it was the ex-Chattanoogans who prodded the Nats into a fourth-place tie with the White Sox.

In fact, the Nats are within whispering distance of second place. When the scoreboard posted Cleveland's 4-1 defeat up in Boston, Washington whittled the Indians' second-place margin to a mere 2½ games.

Sington, Mihalic Star.

Sington and Mihalic were no drawbacks out there in the field, either. In fact, to them Mr. Whitehill is very much indebted for his six-hit performance. Sington, exhibiting none of the clumsiness that had marked his first trial with the Nats, dashed a country mile for a shoestring catch in the second inning and narrowly missed an even more sensational catch in the seventh.

Little Mihalic personally lifted Whitehill over his biggest hump. With two runs across in the eighth inning, a runner on base and the Nats' lead cut to two runs, the dark-skinned second baseman took charge of a ground ball off West's bat that had been ear-marked "hit" from the time it was bashed.

Jay Berwanger Is Given Position As Sports Writer

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP).—John Jacob (Jay) Berwanger, whose football exploits at the University of Chicago brought him all-America honors, is going to write about the game.

Berwanger, of Dubuque, Iowa, was added to the sports staff of a Chicago newspaper today. He will play his last game of football in the third annual All-Star game against the Detroit Lions at Soldier Field. Besides his writing Berwanger will serve as an assistant to Coach Clark Shaughnessy at Chicago this fall.

Big Grid Fray Postponed By Rain

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Rain forced postponement of the football game between the College All-Stars and the Detroit Lions, world professional champions, at Soldier Field tonight, until tomorrow night, causing disappointment to 80,000 fans.

Showers starting shortly after noon thoroughly drenched the huge, horseshoe shaped stadium and showed no signs of abating. Consequently, Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, which annually sponsors the "dream game" of the gridiron, decided two hours before the time for the kick-off to postpone the event rather than submit the spectators to a soaking.

More than 70,000 reserved seats had been sold at the time the game was postponed, and hundreds of spectators were already at the gates of the stadium awaiting sale of the general admission tickets.

The postponement was a disappointment to thousands of out-of-town fans who had made the trip to Chicago in special trains from numerous cities in the Middle West. Two special trains alone came from the Twin Cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, bringing hundreds of fans anxious to see the Minnesota members of the all-star team in action.

Giants Stage Big 5th, Rout Cubs, 7-4

N. Y. Stretches League Lead to 4 Games but Is Outhit.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—The Cubs fell apart for just one inning today, but that was enough for the galloping New York Giants to shove four runs across, sew up a 7-to-4 victory, and take a commanding four-game lead in the National League race.

As a result of taking three out of four in the "crucial" series with the Cubs, the Giants are assured of at least a two-game lead when they return to the Polo Grounds after their two games with the second-place Cardinals tomorrow and Thursday.

Before the fifth ended, the Giants blasted Lee and Roy Henshaw off the mound and scored four times on four hits, an error and a walk.

Ott and Terry were the batting big guns, the former getting a double and three singles, and the New York manager banging out a double and a single to drive in three runs.

AT LOUIS-SHARKEY FIGHT—

77% CHOOSE MELLOW VINTAGE TOBACCO

NEW YORK, N. Y., August 18—Chalk up another for the rich, mellow flavor of Vintage tobacco . . . 255 men at the Louis-Sharkey fight gave Vintage White Owl its fifteenth straight victory.

We picked smokers at random from the crowd . . . gave each two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

No names or familiar bands on the cigars . . . not a thing to prejudice the smokers . . . Taste alone counted. Each man smoked both, then indicated the one he liked best. 77% preferred the Vintage White Owl.

Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform cigar that won those taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

A GREAT COMEBACK for the challenger . . . a quick, decisive victory. And while the crowd roared, the taste test went on to another victory for White Owl. Vintage tobacco must taste better . . . it's been the first choice of smokers in every taste test.

● No one field can always produce good tobacco. In a Vintage year, the leaf is richer, more full-bodied. In our really mild White Owl Cigar, we use only tobacco of Vintage quality. That means special buying.

● White Owl's Crop Inspection System, the only known organization of its kind, keeps a check on growing conditions in the finest filler-tobacco districts in America. We know where Vintage tobacco is maturing and buy the best of it for White Owl.

● Aging by nature! . . . an average of three years. No economical short cuts . . . no secret processes. Vintage tobacco tastes good in its natural state—doesn't need artificial treatment.

Coach Dobson Expects Fun in Developing New Maryland Line

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Maryland's 1936 reported for its first workout of the season yesterday at College Park, and according to the law of averages this should be a story of who was there, what they weigh, how they looked, and that they had light conditioning exercises followed by instructions in fundamentals. They did all that, but Head Coach Frank Dobson made the news of the day.

Mr. Dobson counted off 31 ambitious gridmen, delivered a brief lecture on what he expects of them this autumn, sent them out on the field and showed them exactly what he wanted done and then retired to the sidelines to make the real news.

"Yessir," he said. "This is going to be a great season for me, I'm going to have some real fun."

"You mean you're gonna have an undefeated team like Jack Hagerty at Georgetown?" we chorused.

Attractive Schedule.

"Oh, ho, ho, no," he laughed, "nothing like that. We have one of those tough but attractive schedules, and I don't say we'll get by undefeated. I simply mean it's going to be a great year for me."

The gents of the press gave one another one of those "pay no attention, he's teched in the haid" looks before Dobson continued.

"Just look at my line," he demanded. "Only three men left and not a real replacement in sight, what does that mean?"

"It means the line's gonna be lousy," we replied.

He laughed again. "Not at all, it means I've got to work like the devil to develop a new line, or the best part of one, and boy that's real fun." He was serious about it, too.

"You know," he continued, "coaching is a great game when you have problems to solve. You take a man who has a squad of veterans to choose from, so many that his only worry is picking a starting line-up each week, and it's too much of a cut-and-dried proposition. There's no fun to it."

Expects Good Year.

"But you take a case like mine, you don't know where your next replacement is coming from, so to speak, and you've got something. Yes, sir," he added emphatically, "This is going to be one of my best years."

Dobson had 31 boys out yesterday and almost the full complement of players is expected to be on deck for today's two drills.

Bill Guckeyson, Coleman Headley, Charlie Ellinger, Jim Meade, Johnny Egan and Bob Benbow led the backs in action. Guckeyson got off a couple of beautiful punts that bode no good for Terp opponents. He did no broken field running, of course, unless you want to count a dash to the showers at the conclusion of the drill.

Among those absent and not expected for a couple of days were Vic Willis, Blair Smith, ends; Waverly Wheeler, "Little Knocky" Thomas, and Jack Stonebraker, backs. Dobson expects all in camp before the end of the week, and from what we saw yesterday they'd better hurry if they want places on the squad.

Richmond, V. M. I. Begin Practices.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Thirty candidates reported to Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite at the University of Richmond today and football practice for the 1936 season began in earnest, blocking drills and work on defense were substituted by the veteran Spider mentor for the usual light first-day exercises.

Allen Dixon, veteran and only dependable center, will be back to take two examinations which will determine whether he will be eligible, it was announced.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 1.—Head Coach Bill Raftery and his assistants equipped 25 candidates for the V. M. I. football team today and a four-hour practice session followed.

Dodger-Cardinal Game Rained Out

St. Louis, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Cardinals-Brooklyn Dodgers game was rained out after 3½ innings of play today. The Dodgers were leading 3 to 2 at the time, by virtue of a three-run rally off Si Johnson in the fourth, but the game went down as "no contest" because it had not reached the required minium before it ended.

Rowe's Two-Hit Game Downs Macks, 4-1

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—Schoolboy Rowe held the Athletics to two hits today, a single by Hayes in the eighth and Bob Johnson's twenty-second home run of the season in the ninth, as Detroit won, 4 to 1.

Rowe pitched almost perfect ball for seven innings, allowing only Johnson to reach first in the fifth and seventh, both times on walks.

In the eighth Hayes beat out an infield grounder and Newsome was safe on Rogell's error. However, Rowe fanned Niemiec and Pucciarelli, pinch hitting for Gumpert, and got Finney on a force out.

Johnson's homer came with two out in the ninth.

The Tigers scored all their runs in the fourth without the aid of any of their four hits. Five bases on balls by Bullock, plus a force out and an error by Newsome accounted for the tallies.

Pirates Overcome Bees, Sweep Series

Pittsburgh, Sept. 1 (AP).—Big Jim Weaver tightened up after a weak start today and limited the Boston Bees to seven hits, as the Pirates made a clean sweep of the current series with a 3-to-1 victory.

Weaver bested Danny MacFayden in a close pitching duel to post his thirteenth victory of the season.

A wild throw by Al Todd let in the only Boston run in the first inning, and for the rest of the way, Weaver allowed only four hits.

Mrs. Meckley eliminated Eleanor Smith, of Harrisburg, Pa., 5 and 4, in her morning match, despite a hole-in-one on the 220-yard third by her opponent.

Crossing paths with a Middle Atlantic rival, Mrs. Jerome Sloman, of Baltimore, in the nightcap match, Mrs. Meckley played golf of a championship caliber to win handily, 6 and 5.

Two other Washington challengers, who survived the morning battles, were relegated to the sidelines.

Miss Berg, who yesterday shot a 78 to win medal honors, eliminated the Washington lassie, 6 and 4. Miss Brown won from Mrs. L. O. Cameron, of Chevy Chase, 2 and 1, in her first round match, while Miss Berg was an easy winner over Helen Hackney, of New Bedford, Mass., 6 and 5.

Pritchard Wins $2,500 5-Mile Swim Race

Buffalo Entry Paces Field of 67 Through Chilly Ontario Waters.

By the United Press.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 1.—Frank Pritchard, of Buffalo, N. Y., today easily won the "world's professional five-mile swim" in Lake Ontario's cold waters.

Pritchard won the $2,500 first prize by finishing more than a half mile ahead of his nearest rival among the survivors of the field of 61 starters.

His time of two hours, 7 minutes and 9 seconds set a new world professional record for five miles, bettering the former mark of 2:06:55 established by last year's winner, Gianni Gambi, of Italy. Today Gambi, heavy favorite, suffered cramps and was pulled out of the water after covering only a mile and a half.

More than 40,000 spectators saw Pritchard churn across the finish line to an easy triumph in the annual $4,000 event. He won as he pleased, going into a 300-yard lead at the two-mile mark and lengthening his margin as the race continued. The 61-degree water apparently bothered him none as he forged along steadily with a beat of about 54 to 60 strokes to the minute.

Warren Priddy, virtually unknown swimmer from St. Catherines, Ontario, provided a major surprise by finishing second in 2 hours 23 minutes 41 seconds, to win $750. It was Priddy's first professional race.

Walford Reid Dies Of Game Injury

As a tribute to young Walford Reid, Nokesville outfielder, who died after being struck by a pitched ball in an Old Dominion League game Sunday, all league games for this coming Sunday have been postponed by President Lawrence Langley.

The death of the 24-year-old player Monday night in Casualty Hospital from brain concussion plunged his fellow league members in gloom. The circumstances surrounding the tragedy left his teammates and many acquaintances in northern Virginia more or less stunned.

Reid, a right-handed batter, led off for Nokesville in the eighth inning of his team's game with Park Lane at Nokesville. Vinton (Doc) Payne, veteran Park Lane pitcher loosed a high pitch which caught Reid on the right temple. Reid fell to the ground, but got up, took his base and stayed in the game to the finish.

Reid went to his home and shortly afterward complained of severe headaches. A doctor was called at midnight and Reid was removed to the hospital in the morning. He died about 10 p. m. Among his last words, he expressed regret at not being able to play ball any more. He had been married only a few months.

plate with a booming single to center that put Stone on third, whence he scored on Travis, infield out.

That 1-0 lead was upped to 3-0 in the sixth when Sington again provided the pivotal blow. Lewis launched the proceedings with a single to right and, with one out, Stone walked, whereupon Sington banged a single to center that scored Lewis and put Stone on third. The second run of the inning scored on Travis' fly.

From Second on a Bunt.

Whitehill awoke from any shutout dreams he might have been nursing when he pitched a single to Bell and a double to West in the seventh that gave the Brownies their first run, but the Nats bounced back in the same inning with a pair.

Ben Chapman collected his second double of the game and Lewis laid a safe bunt down the third base line. But while Clift was engaged in a futile attempt to throw out Lewis at first, Chapman rounded third without pausing, dashed for the plate and made it ahead of Bell's throw to Hemsley.

Lewis dashed to second when, Hemsley, in the excitement, forgot to pick up the throw he had droppped and Kuhel scored him with a single to right, to make it 5 to 2.

The Browns began to act up again in the eighth and had two runs across the plate with a runner on third when Mihalic glided far to his left, snatched West's well-tagged grounder and while still off balance shoveled the ball to Kuhel, to give Whitehill his ball game.

National Polo Title to 3d Cavalry

Officers Rally to Take Lead After Trailing at Start of Battle.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 1.—The Third Cavalry officers of Fort Myer, Va., turned back the bid of the Huisache team of Houston, Tex., for its second national polo title in three weeks, by defeating the Texans, 7 to 3, late today in the finals of the national 12-goal polo tournament.

The Fort Myer team was presented with a large trophy and individual cups emblematic of the championship, by Thomas H. White, vice president of the United States Polo Association and chairman of the national tournament.

Huisache galloped to a one-point lead in the first chukker, offsetting a lone Fort Myers goal with two scoring shots. After scoreless second and third chukkers, the officers unleashed a driving offensive that netted them four points. They also registered in the fifth and sixth chukkers.

Billy Dritt Scores.

The Cavalry held the Huisache team until the final chukker when Billy Dritt at No. 3 scored a goal and narrowly missed two others.

Huisache was placed on the defensive early in the game. Three of the officers, Capt. Harry Johnson, Capt. Jack Stadler and Capt. D. H. Galloway, bottled up the Texans, leaving Lieut. George Grunert open and time after time the No. 1 Fort Myers player got away for goals.

The championship match was played at Circle W. Farms after being postponed from Sunday because of rain. It was the second of two national polo tournaments played here, Huisache having annexed the national intercircuit title two weeks ago.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Can a good college football team beat a good professional team? College coaches would have you believe that it can. Professional players laugh 'em off. And that Collegiate All-Star-Detroit Lions battle at Chicago tonight won't prove a thing, because it is fraught with too many alibis.

POVICH.

The Collegians, if beaten, can say, and, rightfully, that it was too much to expect: That an all-star team can't hope to beat a well-balanced crew of good football players because of the absence of cohesive play that is so necessary to the intricate style of the modern game, and that it was impossible to learn a new system of coaching and unlearn old ones.

If defeat should come to the pros, they would have a logical "out" on almost every hand. If disposed to alibi, there is always the excuse that they did not take the game seriously; that there was no sense in risking injury that might impair their professional career and deprive them of a livelihood, and that they were experimenting with new plays and players.

No, it is not a good test of pro football vs. college football. The only way that kind of a comparison could be honestly arrived at would be to fling the champion professional team into the same park with the national college champion and let 'em have at each other—team vs. team—not a collection of all-stars against the professional champions.

If this department's opinion were asked, I would be constrained to cast a forthright vote for professional football as superior to the college brand, despite the head-wagging among the college coaches who lay such store by the spirit that college teams carry onto the field.

The will to win isn't quite enough. Give me the football team with the weapons. And who ever accused the pros of not possessing that winning spirit? Collegians may die for dear old Rutgers, or break a leg for Siwash, but the pro is in there battling for next year's contract and if there is any greater incentive than that in this mundane sphere, then the guy who said they couldn't put you in jail was eminently correct.

The frenzy with which college football players hurl themselves into the contest after a tongue-lashing by coaches with a psychological bump is too often mistaken for winning zeal. More often it is a brutal sacrifice of young manhood with a false sense of values. Give me the pro player, the mercenary who knows his duty on the football field, sees it and does it with an eye to a jucier contract the following season.

And, anyway, howinell can you compare a college football team with a good professional football team? How many good college players can earn a decent living in pro ranks? The man whose name is emblazoned in the Sunday morning headlines would, as like as not, be a flop in pro ranks, where they demand sterner stuff and pay no attention to clippings and scrapbooks.

A reputation as a college star is no guarantee that a lad will make good with the pro league. Scan the rosters of the pro teams and you'll find no more than a sprinkling of the talent is from the big colleges with national reputations. They are far outnumbered by the lads who hail from the bush schools, not so famous, perhaps, but who meet the requirements of the rugged pro game.

The college player, at best, has only three years of big-time football experience, and even a college coach will tell you that the game can't really be learned in three years. Pro football represents a graduate course on the gridiron and any college team assembled is, after all, only a group of undergraduates.

Lou Little, Columbia's coach, is not among the hypocrites. Of any Sunday afternoon in the fall you can find him at the Polo Grounds watching the pro Giants playing some National League opponents. And if you ask him why he's there, he'll tell you frankly: "I came here to marvel at these guys and to learn something about football." And the chances are he's got a half-dozen of his Columbia players with him for the same reason.

Poultry Nine Meets Baltimore Champs

Another softball classic will be served Washington fans this week when the Ehrlich Poultrymen, District champions, collide with the Trenton Democratic Club of Baltimore, Maryland State champions, Friday night in Griffith Stadium. The teams played an 18-inning marathon Sunday before 5,000 fans in Baltimore, the Marylanders winning, 3 to 2.

When the teams take the field at 8:30, it will mark the appearance of two of the outstanding softball pitchers in the East, Bill Parlman, of the Baltimore club, and Bunker Hill, of the Poultry team. Pearlman fanned 22 Poultrymen Sunday and has averaged 15 strikeouts per game throughout the season.

Ouimet Won't Play for Walker Cup

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Clementon, N. J., Sept. 1.—Francis Ouimet, one of the most gallant of them all, retired himself to the sidelines for the first time over his glamorous golfing career today as he set up his battle lines for the first firing against England's invaders in the ninth renewal of the Walker Cup series.

With a slight choke in his throat as he spoke, the veteran 43-year-old campaigner from Boston announced he would remain out of both the foursomes, starting tomorrow, and the singles on Thursday because he didn't think his present play warranted him a competitive berth on the team whose colors never have been lowered in Walker Cup play.

Ouimet, captain of the American forces for the third straight time, has been a vital and illustrious force in this Nation's sweep of the international team series that began in 1922, competing in the doubles and singles of all eight matches, winning 16, losing 4 and halving 2.

"My play today doesn't warrant a playing berth, so I'll stand by and pull for the team," said Capt. Ouimet. "I feel that I can add nothing to the team anyway. I should step aside to give the younger fellows a chance to win some of the glory I have been lucky enough to win. Yes, this makes me the first non-playing captain of our Walker Cup Team."

With a team that is regarded as an overwhelming favorite to retain the trophy that has never been lost, Capt. Ouimet named all but himself, Johnny Fischer and George Dunlap, jr., to compete in tomorrow's foursomes. Fischer and Dunlap, he definitely promised, will compete in the singles.

John Goodman, of Omaha, rated by many as the heir apparent to Lawson Little's National Amateur throne, and Scotty Campbell, of Seattle, were named as the number one double combination for the foursomes.

Voit, of New York, completed the doubles line-up, drawing C. Alec Hill, 28-year-old London stock broker, and Cecil Ewing, the hard-hitting Irishman, as their foes.

Dr. William Tweddell, English team captain, also relegated himself to the sidelines for the foursome competition, but indicated he might play in the singles. Percy Lucas, young English southpaw also was kept out of the picture.

The English team, youngest ever to represent the invading force, didn't have much more than a hope of winning over the highly exacting course that stretches for 6,703 yards down tight fairways lined with mostly pine trees and scrub oaks.

"It looks like a tough assignment," said Capt. Tweddell.

Named as the number two combination were the Texas "golfing tornadoes," Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, and Ed White, rising young star from Bonham, Tex. Opposed to them were Jack McLean, a Walker Cup veteran at 25, and the sensational English schoolboy, 18-year-old John Langley, youngest shot-maker ever to compete on the team.

Charley Yates, of Atlanta, and Walter Emery, 1935 national amateur finalist, were chosen to battle it out against Gordon Peters, 22-year-old newcomer, and J. Morton Dykes, who has led his British teammates in practice rounds over the heavily wooded Pine Valley courts.

All matches will be over 36 holes with morning and afternoon rounds. In foursome play, two balls are used, the players alternating shots. Line-ups for Thursday's eight singles will be announced tomorrow.

6,000 Watch as Jakovia Wins Marlboro Opening Purse by Nose

Daily Double Pays $123 Mutuel

Skyride Is Close 2d as Palumbo Takes His Mount Home 1st.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 1.—Horse racing, Prince Georges County flavor, returned to the side door of Washington today and served to lure some 6,000 regular and occasional turf fans to this ancient track. They stayed to see an interesting program and bet some 40 per cent more than the wagering on last year's opening day. With perfect racing weather and a fast but not dusty track, there were long and short shots to fit any type of bettor and a feature race that brought a thrilling nose finish.

The customers divided their support between Mrs. M. Nelson Bond's Jakovia and B. A. Hall's Skyride. They failed to separate them and the pair went postward as co-favorites. The judges had a hard time separating them, too. After a slight deliberation, Jakovia's No. 6 was hung in the winner's slot and a pay-off of $5.70 was soon under way.

Those who cashed should have had kind thoughts for Jockey Sammy Palumbo, the half-mile champion. It is doubtful if there is another boy on the grounds who could have won with Sir Galahad filly as the race was run. Palumbo fairly lifted the filly's head at the wire to take the decision.

The daily double was a rider's "double" for Jockey Leon Garrett and an owner's and trainer's "double" for H. M. Simpson. For those who invested in the 5-5 combination, it was a 60-to-1 proposition for a mutuel of $123.80 was posted.

The longshot players were off to a flying start with the running of the first race when Timber Lady, owned by H. M. Simpson, made a show of her field in the five and one-half furlong test. Ridden by Leon Garrett, Timber Lady gained command going to the first turn and made every post a winning one thereafter. Little Banner was an energetic second and was wearing down the winner at the end. Miss Adeline was a badly beaten third. Those who could find something in the past performances to guide them collected a $34.10 mutuel.

A well-played son of Flying Ebony, Justa Flight, took the second race in impressive fashion. Capably handled by Bootsie Hernandez, Justa Flight forged to the front in the early stages and it was just breeze to the finish. Timber Phantom was in trouble repeatedly and closed like the wind when finding racing room. Flying Dervish took the show money. The winner paid $7.40.

Miss Symphony had no sympathy for those who did not bet on her in the third race. She answered Garrett's call for speed by going to the top soon after the break and shook off challenge after challenge to defeat Follow On by a length. Mazyniata was a faltering third in the field of eight. Miss Symphony paid $9.80.

TIMBER LADY, sent to the front in the opening furlong under hustling tactics, drew out to a long lead at the far turn, but had to be shaken up in the closing stages to hold LITTLE BANNER safe. The latter, in trouble for a quarter, came with good courage when clear and was slowly wearing down the winner. MISS ADELINE chased the pace setter for three furlongs and tired gradually. JUSTA TOWN had brief early speed. The others were outrun.

TIMBER PHANTOM was in trouble early and Palumbo was forced to pull up entering the backstretch, she came with good speed when clear and took the place in the concluding strides. FLYING DERVISH went to the leaders with a rush at the far turn, but was tiring at the end. DRESSMAKER closed full of run. ROYAL FOLLY went forwardly for three furlongs.

GOLDEN PLAY came with a belated rush in the closing three furlongs and was going fastest at the end. TRYLURIA ran GENTLEMAN and CANOPIA into defeat and tired slightly in the closing furlong. NEVER IDOL came from far back.

253 Companies Net 73% More In 2d Quarter

Autos, Building Supplies, Chemicals and Tools Chief Gainers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—An increase of 73 per cent in net profits of 253 industrial and mercantile corporations in the three months ended with June compared with the corresponding period last year was shown today in a compilation by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Outstanding in earnings improvement were automobile, building supplies, chemical and drug, machinery and tool and steel groups which benefited from expansion in construction and revived demand for industrial equipment.

For the first half of 1936, net profits of 380 industrial and mercantile companies were 60 per cent above figures for the comparable period last year, the reserve bank said in its monthly review. The half-year showing was only about 13 per cent below profits for the corresponding 1930 period.

Reserve Increase.

Discussing the 50 per cent increase in reserve requirements for member banks August 15, the reserve bank noted the "only discernible change in the position of the reserve banks was a small increase in the number and amount of loans to member banks, caused by borrowings of a few banks that did not have sufficient funds immediately available to cover the increase in their reserve requirements.

"The aggregate amount of such loans to member banks was about $1,400,000 in this district and approximately $2,100,000 for the country as a whole." Following the increase, the bank said, the ratio of excess reserves to required reserves was smaller in New York City than the average for all member banks.

The ratio for New York City dropped from 96 to 30 per cent. All member banks had a ratio of about 50 per cent compared with 120 before the boost.

Waldorf System Votes Increase and 10c Extra

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Directors of Waldorf System, Inc., declared an extra dividend today of 10 cents and a quarterly dividend of 30 cents on the common stock. The latter disbursement places the common on a $1.20 annual basis against 80 cents previously. Both dividends are payable October 1 to stock of record September 19. On July 1 last a dividend of 20 cents a share was paid.

The company operates a chain of restaurants and confectionery establishments in New England and New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, with headquarters in Boston.

Dividend Changes.

New York, Sept. 1.—Favorable dividend changes in August totaled 212, against 186 the preceding month, and 105 in August, 1935, according to the Standard Statistics Co. Unfavorable changes numbered seven, compared with four in July.

Commercial Loans Show Sharp Rise

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—An unusually vigorous increase for the time of year in loans, other than those on securities, was noted today by the monthly review of the New York Federal Reserve Bank as one of outstanding banking developments of August.

Principal New York City banks, the review said, showed an increase of approximately $40,000,000 in this type of borrowing in the three weeks ended August 26 while reporting banks in other leading cities showed a rise of $84,000,000 in the three weeks ended August 19.

The review pointed out that while commercial borrowing frequently reaches the summer low point at the end of July and shows the beginning of the autumn increase during August, this year the rise occurred after practically no seasonal decline, and carried totals to a level last seen in the autumn of 1933.

$50,000,000 Bills 3.5 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated September 2, 1936, and maturing June 2, 1937, which were offered on August 28, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total amount applied for was $176,162,000, of which $50,012,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.909, equivalent to a rate of 0.120 per cent per annum, to 99.883, equivalent to a rate of about 0.154 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

Georgia Central Railway To Omit Bond Interest

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Directors of Central of Georgia Railway Co. announced that no interest will be paid on the first preference, second preference and third preference income bonds, as for the fiscal year ended June 30, last.

There were no net earnings available for such payment, it was said.

Steel Shares Lead August Market Rise

Railroad and Electrical Equipment Stocks Rank Next.

New York, Sept. 1.—The market value of 100 representative common stocks recorded the usual August increase with a gain of $267,738,000, or 1.2 per cent for the month, according to the monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. Not since these statistics first were compiled 10 years ago has the index recorded a decline in August, except in 1930, when a nominal setback of .7 of 1 per cent was shown.

The further improvement in prices marked continuation of the rise that has persisted since April, 1935. In only one of the last 17 months has the valuation of common stocks failed to show an increase. Ten of the 13 divisions recorded advances in the last month, the three showing declines being the oils, motors, and miscellaneous industrials. The last named group dropped less than 1 per cent.

The largest gain was recorded in the steels, which rose 11.2 per cent. The railroad equipment and electrical equipment groups, representing heavy industries, also made forward progress, with gains of 7.8 and 5.9 per cent, respectively. The mines recovered 4.1 per cent, while smaller gains were recorded by the rails, the building stocks and the chemicals. Foods and marchandising stocks were little changed.

On a dollar basis the decline of $110,486,000 in the motor group was offset by the increase of $111,481,000 in the steels, while the loss of $61,146,000 in the oils and $9,933,000 in the industrials was more than offset by the advance of $105,717,000 in the electrical equipments.

New Company to Buy Franklin Motors

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—Ben Wiles, Syracuse attorney, announced yesterday the Olympic Motor Car, Inc., is prepared to acquire the Franklin Motors, Inc., plant here and "proceed with plans for getting out sample cars in the low-priced bracket." Wiles, attorney for Arthur J. Brandt, a Detroit, Mich., engineer, issued the following statement:

"The Olympic Motor Car, Inc., has been formed to take over the interests of Mr. Brandt and Mr. Glancy (Alfred R. Glancy, former vice president of General Motors and an organizer of Franklin Motors, Inc.) and Mr. Williams (John E. Williams, of Syracuse, president of Franklin Motors, Inc.) and acquire the Franklin plant and essential equipment and certain other equipment disposed of.

"All litigation concerning property has been settled, leaving the way clear to proceed with plans for getting out sample cars in the low-priced bracket."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Weaken in Last Hour; Treasury Bonds Strong; Wheat and Corn Lower.

New York, Sept. 1.—Treasury bonds were pushed to new high prices and other good grades were strong, but that completed the market's list of virtues. Stock prices were mixed throughout and in the last hour softened a little, with the railroad issues leading the retreat. Commodities also looked undernourished. Both wheat and corn dropped. September wheat closed half a cent lower at 108⅜ cents a bushel. Turnover in stocks was not much above a million shares.

Stocks began the new month in a manner to suggest that any change from the August regime would be slow in appearing. Prices last month, considering 225 representative stocks checked by the Sun rose a little on balance, but group movements were mixed, indicating a good deal of liquidation as well as new acquisition. Stocks as a whole rose six-tenths of 1 per cent in August, the fourth consecutive monthly gain, and the smallest of the four. However, the stock rise has run through 16 of the past 17 months, last April being the exception.

Most pronounced strength was shown by the steel and iron section, which advanced 10 per cent. Railroad equipments, sugars and amusements followed with 9 per cent each. Electrical equipment and machinery rose 5.5 per cent and metals added 3½ per cent to their prices on the month. Department stores rose only 2 per cent, which was the increase scored by the rails. On the other side, paper products dropped 12 per cent, motors 2.5 per cent and chemicals 2 per cent. Rubber shares slipped 1 per cent.

Investment Shifts.

With the market as a whole last month circling on small volume, the urge increased to shift investments and speculative holdings. That accounts for the gains in some groups against the declines in others, and also emphasizes the point that stocks often are strongest during or immediately before their best earnings periods. Motors suffered from profit taking after factories had begun to close for new models, and the rails came forward when earnings and car loadings had forced themselves into the market's notice. The steels added to their strength when it was discovered that the usual summer recession was not taking place. At the close of August the market valuation of stocks was the highest since February, 1931.

Today the silver stocks advanced on knowledge that indirectly the Government was supporting them, but few other groups were able to look interesting, after an early hardening. In the last hour general debility increased and even the steels fell below the previous closing prices. The effort to give new life to the motor stocks didn't come to much. Railroad stocks were hard for a while, but lacked the courage to go it alone.

Money markets were unchanged with the new month. Foreign exchanges moved in favor of the dollar. The price for francs showed a profit on gold shipments, but probably not much gold, if any, was dealt for export from Paris, because the drop in francs came a little late for transportation arrangements.

Rise in Profits.

A certain official flavor is given by the New York Federal Reserve Bank to previously published statistical compilations on the gains shown by corporation earnings this year compared with last. The bank's figures for 380 industrial and mercantile concerns for the first half of this year shows an increase of 60 per cent in profits over 1935, which is about the rate of gain indicated by the Sun's compilation. Excellent as has been the progress, the actual position is still some distance under even one of the depression years, for earnings in the half year were 13 per cent under those of 1930.

Several important groups, according to the Federal Reserve Bank, including the durable goods industries, are still running more than 60 per cent under the corresponding period of the 1930 depression year. That emphasizes the point that, granted Government expenditures may have had something to do with current public spending, the beneficiaries have been the quick consumption industries, and in that section depression never goes especially deep. Railroads in the first half continued to operate at a deficit, although at reduced loss. Public utilities made modest improvement.

The day's contribution to business statistics included some favorable earnings news and the report of the member banks of the Federal Reserve System, which showed another rise in commercial loans—$16,000,000 for the week. Expansion in business borrowing at this season of the year is a seasonal development, but one which was so weak as to be unimportant in several years. That it is now making itself felt is a reminder that the business recovery is obtaining a good foothold. Since the end of July the commercial loans of member banks have increased $121,000,000 and the rise in the past year has been more than $500,000,000. In other words, the deflation period in which business has struggle to pay off old debt has given way to the recovery phase of debt expansion.

Banking Position.

The principal feature of the weekly return of member banks in 101 leading cities was an increase of $117,000,000 in demand deposits, of which $108,000,000 occurred in New York City banks, produced mainly by Treasury expenditures. The reporting banks liquidated $84,000,000 of Government direct obligations and added $92,000,000 to their reserves. Of the contraction in holdings of Government securities $56,000,000 was the share of local institutions, while reserves of New York banks rose $130,000,000, or more than the increase for all banks, revealing a substantial flow of funds from other districts to New York. Aside from an increase of $36,000,000 in brokers' loans and a $16,000,000 expansion in miscellaneous and commercial loans, changes in loan portfolios were unimportant. Virtually all the rise in brokers' loans and $9,000,000 of the expansion in commercial loans occurred on the books of New York City banks. Chicago banks lost $38,000,000 of their reserves to New York and bought Government securities which New York banks disposed of, the increase in Government securities held in Chicago reporting banks being $38,000,000 for the week.

N. Y. City Borrows At Record Low Rate

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—All previous records for low interest rates on New York City securities were smashed today when Comptroller Frank J. Taylor sold $6,000,000 of special corporate notes at the rate of 22-100 of 1 per cent, which, with a premium netted the city 21-100 and a fraction. The successful bidder was Chase National Bank and associates.

Last July the city disposed of $5,000,000 worth of similar notes at an interest rate of 34-100 of 1 per cent and a small premium which was the previous low price to today's offering.

Keystone Steel & Wire Raises Wages of 1,500

New York, Sept. 1.—A general wage increase and profit sharing plan, which together are expected to boost the average annual earnings of 1,500 employes of the Keystone Steel & Wire Co. by a total of some $200 000 to the highest level in the company's history, were announced today by R. E. Sommer, vice president and general manager.

A wage increase equivalent to 3 cents an hour on average hourly earnings has been granted to all plant employes effective August 30. This is the second general increase since January 1, 1934, the previous one having been a 10 per cent general increase put into effect as of April 1, 1934. The company's factory pay rolls are currently running at an annual rate of $2,000,000.

Farm Milk Income $129,000,000 in July

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Milk Industry Foundation reported today the American farmer's cash income from milk in July totaled $129,000,000, compared with $128,000,000 in June and $118,000,000 in July, 1935. For the seven months ended July 31 total farm income from milk was estimated at $812,000,000, against $768,000,000 in the comparable 1935 period.

"Part of the unusually large July increase," the report said, "was due to farmers receiving substantially larger unit prices for their milk as a result of the drought."

Foreign Markets.

London, Sept. 1 (AP).—Industrial issues were active and strong in today's stock market, with tobacco, silk and cement shares in demand. Oils, kaffirs and gilt-edged securities moved higher while transatlantic stock and foreign bonds had an irregular tone.

Paris, Sept. 1 (AP).—Firmness prevailed in the bourse, there being a good demand for banking issues and coal shares. The industrial group was generally higher and rentes were also supported.

Liverpool, Sept. 1 (AP).—Wheat futures closed lower due to the poor milling demand and American selling. Cotton advanced on covering and speculative buying in anticipation of a reduced American crop estimate.

Middle Atlantic P. G. A. Trials Are Listed

By Dave Herman.

The Middle Atlantic qualifying trials for the National P. G. A. championship will be played on either September 24 or 25 at the James River course of Country Club of Virginia in Richmond.

Alec Taylor, Rolling Road professional, president of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., said last night that these dates would be submitted to Bobby Cruickshank, Country Club pro.

Taylor vigorously denied the published report that September 15 had been selected as the date for the 36-hole qualifying test. He said that this date merely was discussed by members of his committee, but that nothing official had come from him.

Several District professionals, including George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, and Al Treder, of Manor, had planned to pass up the Richmond test if September 15 date was official, saying they wanted to take in a bit of the National Amateur championship, which falls on the week of September 14.

Three qualifying places will be open. The champoinship proper is scheduled at Pinehurst November 16-22, inclusive.

Entries for the District golf championship scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Manor Club are due to close tonight. Entries should be filed with Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary, at Manor. Roger Peacock, of Congressional, will defend his crown.

The 18-hole qualifying round will be followed by two days of match play, the tournament ending on a Sunday for the first time in history. Manor will be open today and tomorrow for practice rounds.

Al Jamison, Wiffy Cox's assistant at Kenwood, shattered par with a 69 at his home course. Jamison turned in 33. A better break in putting, and he would have been five shots lower.

Warrenton Plans All-Day Exhibition

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Addition of a number of horse classes has enabled the Warrenton Junior Hunt to present an all-day program for its annual field day Saturday at Stonlea, the home of Mrs. John S. Gaines.

The first class, for ponies, will be called at 10 a. m. and will include lead, child's saddle, junior and senior horsemanship, saddle ponies under 12 hands, saddle ponies over 12 hands, large and small hunter ponies, touch and go, saddle pairs, and a pony championship.

Tack and ribbons will be awarded and an admission fee of $2 per pony for the entire show will be charged.

Horse show classes are handy hunters, barebask, touch and go, green hunters, children's hunters, handicap, ladies' hunters, and children's saddle horse. There will also be a horse championship.

Mathias, Cartoonist-Fighter, Heads Amateur Card Tonight

Bob Mathias, cartoon-drawing and hard-punching local amateur welterweight, will forsake his drawing board tonight long enough to battle Tony Miller, of Richmond, in the feature of an 11-bout card to be presented at Duffy Stadium, Seat Pleasant. The first bout is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

This will be the second meeting between the pair, Miller winning a close decision over Mathias in their scrap for the championship of the Twenty-ninth Division, National Guard, about three weeks ago. The Virginian also is State champion at his weight and has a long string of victories, including 10 knockouts, to his credit.

Mathias is rated as one of the best welterweights in the amateur game. He has developed a knockout punch that goes straight from the shoulder, and leaves them kicking. Disappointed by his defeat in their title scrap, the District lad is out to obtain revenge tonight.

Viewed from any angle tonight's card is the best amateur affair ever staged in the city. It will be a parade of champions, for the Virginians boast four titleholders and the local team will have six in its line-up. Jimmy Ortiz, Eddie Saugstad, El Brookman, George Pickeral and Mike Morton, all champions, are included in the District team.

Admission will be 50 cents, proceeds to be used for new equipment for the Seat Pleasant, Hillside and Capitol Heights fire departments, which are sponsoring the show. A gate prize, consisting of a week-end at Virginia Beach for two, all expenses paid, also will be awarded.

The line-ups:

	Richmond	Washington
118 pounds	Earl Tucker	vs. Eddie Saugstad.
140 pounds	Jack Mathews	vs. Wes Bealm.

Naval Air Station Wins Service Title

Naval Air Station, champions of the Army and Navy League of the Post Sandlot Association, yesterday ascended to the championship of Virginia, Maryland and the District for service teams by defeating Fort Belvoir, Md., Third Corps Area title-holders, 9 to 5.

The veteran, Johnny Bitzka, pitched the Air Station club to its triumph, allowing nine hits but keeping them fairly well scattered. Sasko, Fort Belvoir centerfielder, was the big gun at bat, pounding out a homer and double. It was the second straight win for Naval Air over Fort Belvoir.

OleAnderson to Use Trick Legs on Mat

The card will terminate the 1936 open-air season here.

Anderson boasts he can wiggle out of any hold Dusek can apply. Not only that, he insists he can score with his own pet hold, dubbed—for some reason—the Swedish crab hold.

Anderson, who perfected his leg work in foreign rings, boasts that he can alternately hook, jab and cross uppercuts on an opponent meet Henri Piers, Abe Coleman with his educated underpinning.

In other matches, limited to 30 minutes, Ralph Garibaldi will tackle Ed Meske, Cliff Olson will will engage Tex Morgan, and Abe Yourist will encounter Floyd Marshall.

Jefferson Playground Wins City Crown, 4-3

35 'Weaklings' Report to Hardell

Tech Coach Has His Boys at Maryland U.; 43 at Central Drill.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A crew of 35 "weaklings" is now working out at the University of Maryland with the hope of "making" Tech High's football team. The description is Coach Hap Hardell's who claims that Tech will finish no higher than third place in the inter-high series this year.

With the exception of Coach Hardy Pearce's inter-high champions from Central, Tech is the only squad back in the football harness. Coach Dan Ahearn, of Western, and Coach Artie Boyd, of Eastern, are calling out their forces Tuesday. Coach Lynn Woodworth, of Roosevelt, is still among the Alps and will not return until about September 20 but the Rough Riders are expected to take the field next week under a coach pro-tem.

Coach Pearce doled out 43 uniforms yesterday and begins intensive practice today with blackboard drills in the afternoon and workouts in the a. m.'s. Among the more prominent members present were Charlie Jones, Sam Fox and Billy Vermillion but Bill Wooten, considered one of the main backfield reliances, is still among the absent.

The doleful remarks of Coach Hardell were completely in tune with his usual utterances at this season. The coach has the boys quartered in the Ritchie Coliseum and they have the run of the university practice fields, but, says he, all to no avail.

"I got about 35 weaklings out there," groaned the coach. "A few husky boys, but not many. Last year we had our worst season and this one won't be any better."

Coach Boyd figures he has a mansized job in building a championship contender, enumerating in rapid succession the number of men he lost by graduation and the vacancies he must fill in the line. Coach Ahern was even more pessimistic. His only prediction was that he expects to have "absolutely nothing." Western lost nine regulars by graduation.

Bowling Leagues Plan Meetings This Week

Several meetings of interest to annual bowling leagues which are planning an early fall season get-a-way are on tap this week.

The Hebrew Interclub League will open its bid for franchises tonight at 8 o'clock at the Convention Hall and the Typothetae League will be called to order tomorrow night at 7:30 at the office of President Chick Heimer at 1220 C street.

After a very successful season last year the 16-team Ladies Federal League loop, the largest feminine group in the city, will meet at the Arcadia drives tomorrow night at 8. A representative from each team is requested to be present.

William Daly may go down in history as the only man in music who can contradict himself and get away with it. The N. B. C. conductor tried it recently by writing two original compositions, "Hold Me," and "Don't Hold Me," and he found the results interesting.

The whole thing was inspired by accident. Last winter, when Gladys Swarthout visited New York, Daly played for her his lastest composition, "Hold Me." She liked it so much she said she would like to have it used in the score of her forthcoming picture, "Champagne Waltz."

"Send the song to me in Hollywood and I'll show it to the directors," she urged Daly.

He did, but as a last-minute inspiration, he tucked in another song titled with the opposite imperative, "Don't Hold Me."

It was just a caprice on Daly's part, but the movie moguls took it seriously. They decided to hold "Don't Hold Me," and not hold "Hold Me." It will be sung by Miss Swarthout under the new title, "Could I Be in Love," with lyrics by Leo Robin.

As for "Hold Me," that too will have a distinguished public premiere. Margaret Speaks has chosen it for one of her featured numbers on the Voice of Firestone concerts, which Daly directs over an NBC-Red Network each Monday at 8:30 p. m. E. D. S. T. The song also will be published.

After 60 successive weeks of broadcasting on a five-times-a-week schedule, the "March of Time" will be discontinued for a short period after the program of September 23, to give its producers, writers and actors a much-needed rest before returning to the Columbia network for its fall series.

Janney to Face Rosedale for City Crown

The playground baseball championship of the city will be at stake today when Janney and Rosedale nines meet on the South Ellipse at 2:30 p. m. in the final game of the annual tournament of the department of playgrounds.

Boasting a powerful line-up consisting of high school and former high school stars, the Janney team is held a favorite to make off with the title. Manager Pete Chumbris of Janney is counting on either Kilmer Bortz, Woodrow Wilson High's youthful ace, or Toby Wright, new "find" at Western High, to take care of the pitching burden.

The remainder of the Janney forces will consist of Buck Barbee behind the bat; Dan Maloney at first; Joe Moran, Central's all-high star, at second; Dick Lynham, all-high third baseman from Western, and Shorty Chumbris, former all-high shortstop from Central. In the outfield, Lefty Chumbris, another all-high choice, will share the chasing with Johnny Stevens and Buck Buchanan.

Janey holds the championship of the Northwest section and Rosedale of the Northeast. Both teams beat Jefferson Playground, champions of the Southeast and Southwest. Rosedale won, 12 to 6; Janney, 5 to 1.

Gallagher Victor Over Levinsky

in the early rounds and Levinsky was forced to clinch desperately in the ninth and tenth rounds to keep from journeying to the floor.

In a semifinal scheduled for six rounds which followed the main event, Pal Silvers, of New Jersey, knocked out Al Massey, of Charlotte, N. C., after 2 minutes and 30 seconds of the second round.

Killer Lamar Stopped.

Killer Lamar, Washington's own Joe Louis, was the victim of a startling upset at the hands of Shorty Ahearn, a New York Negro nogginknocker who stopped the Killer in 2 minutes and 5 seconds of the first round of a scheduled six-rounder. The Killer was doing all right for the Lamars until he was caught by a left hook to the head which sent him down for the doleful decimal.

Frankie Litt, Jack Dempsey's lightweight protege, and Bobby Dechter, a local 135 pounder, went six rounds to a draw in a good bout which opened the proceedings.

Johnny Pacek, stablemate of Levinsky's, won a unanimous decision from Lou Lepage, a New Jersey heavyweight, in a six-round preliminary which preceded the main bout. Pacek, using a ducking wild swing as the results of weeks of training with Levinsky, had little trouble avoiding the roundhouse wallops tossed at him by his willing opponent.

Colgate Gridmen Get 'Scrimmage Guests

Likewise came the statement that Colgate was angling for games with Cornell, Northwestern and Wisconsin, all as possible season openers.

Strike at Plant In Cumberland Is Terminated

Meeting of Kelly Workers Called to Ratify Agreement.

Cumberland, Sept. 1 (AP).—Labor leaders announced today an agreement had been reached ending an eight-day-old strike at the Kelly-Springfield tire plant here.

State Senator Robert B. Kimble, William J. Carney and John Geis, representatives of the United Rubber Workers of America local, made the announcement. They had been conferring for several days with representatives of the plant management.

They called a meeting of members of the union to ratify the settlement agreed upon in the conferences.

Geis is president of the rubber workers local. When the strikers walked out a week ago yesterday, he announced the objectives were wages on a parity with those paid rubber workers at Akron, Ohio; recognition of the union, reinstatement of furloughed employes, shorter hours and better working conditions.

The union members met at the State armory tonight for their action on the agreement. Pending their reception of the settlement, both company and union officials reserved comment.

Craig Almost Loses Army Job in Desire To Serve Harvard

Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, almost swore himself out of office recently, it was learned yesterday.

Gen. Craig, among others, had been selected by President Roosevelt for a place on the Harvard Tercentenary Commission. To accept the post he was required to take an oath of office.

Gen. Craig was about to have himself sworn in when an aid in his office remembered what happened to an Army engineer officer in 1922. This officer, appointed to an Alaskan commission by President Harding, took an oath of office.

The Comptroller General's office discovered an old law which said that an Army officer who took oath for any outside position automatically vacated his Army commission. An act of Congress was required to reinstate the engineer officer.

Gen. Craig learned from Judge Advocate General Arthur Brown that such a law was still in effect.

4 Killed, 5 Hurt As Span Breaks Near Richmond

One of Two Trucks Bearing WPA Workers Hurled Into Ravine.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Sept. 1.—Four WPA workers were killed and five injured late today when a highway bridge collapsed about five miles from Richmond in Chesterfield County.

Three white men died instantly when the span gave way beneath their truck and hurled them to the bottom of a 15-foot ravine. A colored worker riding with them died three hours later in a Richmond hospital.

Five others returning from their day's work in another truck were injured, though none believed critically.

The dead, all of Richmond: Frank M. Kirby, 34; Luther Crumpler, 27; Lawrence Davis, 18; John Grant, colored.

The bridge spanned Falling Creek on State Route 10, a primary highway.

Commonwealth's Attorney M. A. Cogbill and Dr. T. G. Pretlow, Chesterfield coroner, said they would continue their investigation tomorrow in an effort to fix responsibility for the accident.

Meanwhile, the State highway department launched a separate examination of the wrecked structure at the direction of Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley.

The injured are: James H. Campbell, 26, Richmond; W. H. Godsey, 32, of Centralia, Chesterfield County; F. M. Minton, 31; Edward L. Moore, 20, and W. E. Cumber, 19, all of Richmond.

Three Hurt in Accident.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 1.—Three persons were injured early yesterday morning when the automobile in which they were riding overturned near Pen Mar Park.

Landon Charts Drought Policy At Conference

"None hoped more earnestly than I that the New Deal might see its opportunity and make use of it," Darling said.

"I have known the Governor for years. He seems to have his feet on the ground and possess a solid executive capacity. He doesn't become hysterical and he isn't dramatic, but he knows what he is doing."

Landon remained away from his office for these conferences, preferring the executive mansion. From time to time aids were summoned from the Capitol for instructions.

Officials said the Governor had decided to motor to Des Moines early Thursday. There was a possibility Landon would motor home the same night; if not, he would drive back Friday morning. Plans to go from Des Moines to Estes Park, Colo., to visit his family, they said, were abandoned.

Landon advisers said the Republican candidate regarded the Des Moines meeting strictly as President Roosevelt's conference, which he would attend only in the capacity of Governor of Kansas. Views expressed by Landon, they said, would depend largely upon the course of the conference as guided by the President.

A letter written by Landon to Mr. Roosevelt in 1934—another drought year—was recalled by associates today as a probable indication of his position Thursday. This communication, dated June 2 and published in Topeka newspapers June 4, said the "needs" of water conservation and flood control "can and must be co-ordinated," adding:

"The first need for the watersheds of Kansas and Arkansas," Landon wrote, "is a complete program of water conservation and flood control. Such a program, of course, would include plans for the control of soil erosion, plans for the encouragement of the building of small ponds by private property owners, plans for relatively small impounding reservoirs on creeks, plans for larger reservoirs on larger tributaries, plans for a few very large lakes which serve the purpose of recreational areas and water storage against low water stages in the river; plans for levees and stream improvement in the lower reaches of the rivers and related studies of land use in affected areas."

Landon urged the President "to exert your influence and authority to provide means through which State and Federal agencies may work together in the completion of detailed engineering surveys of every small tributary."

"Any legislation or Administrative order," the Governor wrote, "which leads to immediate and effective steps in this direction (a comprehensive conservation-flood control program) will create permanent benefits beyond any present concept. The people of our State have come to a realization of this. Your effort now in meeting the need will be most timely and of great help to present and future generations."

Landon told newsmen he had received several replies to his appeal to railroads yesterday that emergency freight rates in Kansas drought areas be put on a joint basis so that the farmer would get the benefit of the reduction when feed shipments moved over more than one road. These replies, he said, promised serious consideration of his request at a Chicago conference September 4.
